Town wins ETJ rep case, again

On Dec. 18, 2007, The N.C. Court of Appeals upheld the judgment of Judge Dennis J. Winner in the Macon County Superior Court and the petition heard by the Court of Appeals on Aug. 23, 2007 – that the town properly determined the proportion of ETJ representatives on its Planning and Zoning boards.

The county contended that the trial court erred by granting the town's motion for summary judgment because there were genuine controversies as to the meaning of the word "population" in the N.C.

Gen. Stat. 160A-362 and the town didn't comply with the statute when it adopted amendments to its extraterritorial jurisdiction ordinance.

"We disagree and affirm the judgment of the trial court that

First snow fall of 2008

2007 ended with unseasonably warm weather but by nightfall on Jan. 1, 2008 the temperature was dropping and around 8 p.m. snow began to fall. By the morning of Jan. 2, about two inches of dry powder covered the plateau accompanied by arctic weather with a low of 4 degrees and a high of 10 degrees for the day. Above Mirror Lake canoes nestle under the snow.

Pollsters predict Western NC voters

By Tom Jensen
Contributor

John Edwards and Mike Huckabee are the most popular Presidential candidates in their own parties in western North Carolina, according to recent surveys conducted by Raleigh's Public Policy Polling. But Rudy Giuliani is the most popular candidate with the public at large in WNC.

Public Policy Polling has conducted monthly polls in 2007 about the various statewide races we will have in North Carolina next year. One of the ways we analyze our results is by region, so as we enter 2008 it seems worth taking a look at the attitudes of WNC voters about next year's candidates.

On the Democratic side, John Edwards has been more popular with his home state voters in western North Carolina than any other region of the state. Hillary Clinton has led in many state wide polls of Democrats, but Edwards has led in the mountains nearly every month, most recently leading Clinton

Students learn 'spit' tobacco far from 'cool'

– Screening IDs 7 students with potential problems –

By Sally Hansen
Reporter

On Dec. 4, Macon County students saw up close and personal real-life disastrous affects spit tobacco can have on their lives.

Students at Macon Middle School (MMS) and Franklin High School (FHS) had the opportunity to see a presentation by oral cancer survivor Gruen Von Behrens on the dangers of spit tobacco use. The presentation was made possible by a grant from the North Carolina Health and Wellness Trust Fund, which funds programs that promote preventive health.

Von Behrens is now 29 years old, but he began using spit tobacco when he was 13 years old. Four years later he was diagnosed with oral cancer. To date, Von Behrens has had 34 surgeries on his face and neck. His medical bills are estimated to have been between $2.5 and $3 million.

Von Behrens made three presentations during his time in Macon County. One of these was for 7th and 8th grade students at MMS and the other two included FHS students, students from the Early College High School, students from Union Academy, and around 40 community leaders.

Twas the week after Christmas, resolutions abound,
With electronic beeping the only night sound.
The stockings were flung all empty and forgotten
To fill ipods and blackberrys, be-fitting a glutton.

The energy required quietly quickening a drain
Of our resources for power...oh, what a strain!
The downloads continue well into the night
And batteries recharged; indicators alight.

When what should arise, but a wind that blew colder, Adding wood to the fire, turning heaters to smolder.
On top of the plug-ins was too much of a load.
The transformers grew hot, crackled, proceeded to explode!

The lights, they did flicker, go out – all is black.
With time to ponder electricity, that which I now lack,
I remember a movie; I can see Al Gore's face, Warning consumers, "We can't keep this pace."

'Oneness' theory questioned

Dear Editor:

In a recent "Reflections from Turtle Pond" Katie Brugger expounded on her beliefs on the "oneness" of the universe. In the same article she mentioned a book she and her husband wrote entitled The Game of God. I would like to make a response.

The book The Game of God is a 300-page explanation of the authors' belief system, complete with visual aids. The title of the introduction is, "Why we need to forgive God," and is available for reading on www.gameofgod.com.

As a Christian, the thought of God justifying himself to me makes me uncomfortable. Nonetheless, I trudged on. The authors dedicate a small portion of the beginning of the book rejecting and vilifying the god that would knowingly create a universe filled with suffering inhabitants; they then spend the remainder of the book building a case for a god that knowingly created a universe filled with suffering inhabitants. Although I'm not sure who it is that supposedly believes in the aforementioned rejected god, one can only assume that it is intended to be a caricature of the God of the Bible, but it is this god that needs our forgiveness. They then state their intentions of proposing a theory of "Creator and creation as one. The universe, we will assert, is a Game of God. We hold that this model allows us to absolutely forgive, and thus absolutely love, God."

This world view presents itself as the answer to questions other religions have failed to answer. Really? I have heard it said that for any belief system to have validity, it must give coherent answers to four fundamental questions. These are questions of origin, meaning, morality, and destiny. So, does the theoretical model given to us in The Game of God provide these answers?

What of the question of origin? The theoretical god came to the conclusion that to be truly unlimited, one must experience ultimate limitation. To accomplish this goal of experiencing limitation, this god decided to place itself into a state of self-induced amnesia at the very instant of the Big Bang. The entire universe is thus made up of this forgetful creator and is in a constant process of "re-awakening."

First of all, I disagree with the concept of having to experience something in order to have knowledge of it. After all, it is possible to have knowledge of suicide without ever having experienced it. Secondly, would the revelation of needing to experience limitation not mean that this god has spent eternity past as an incomplete deity?

MY 2008 predictions (You had better sit down!)

Well, it's 2008 and I'm excited, how 'bout you? I'm excited because I made it through 2007 without getting fired or strangled by a reader and my health is holding...for now. For a guy born a decade before black and white TV became commonplace, that's a biggie.

It's also time for me to look at my crystal ball and make my predictions for 2008. No, crystal ball is not the sister of Lucille Ball but if you know her then you have also watched black and white TV.

Here goes:

Pranksters will vandalize the front of the Methodist church by throwing expensive glass Christmas ornaments at the building. A small note inside one of the broken ornaments will read, "Behold! No good deed goes unpunished."

During a January commission meeting, Larry Rogers will look Hank Ross square in the eye and say, "Ya ain't from 'round here, are ya?"

Bonny & Billy Gibson of Macon, GA, will join with CLE and teach proper English to Mexicans, "Y'all come now, ya hea" is the title of their first class.

The Town Board will decide what to do about building a new Town Hall. They'll redo the bathrooms and bolt a single wide to the back of the building.

On a tight vote, the Town Board will put the beautiful Pine Street Park project on a back burner. At least two commissioners will whisper "Now turn the burner on." Dogs will be banned from the beautiful park, causing animal lovers to storm Town Hall and ask "What's a doggie to doo-doo?"

The Town Board will unanimously agree to ban the word "bond" forevermore from the town of Highlands. Then they will throw Nin Bond out of town to prove how serious they are.

Christmas parade organizers will ban the Roto Rooter truck from the 2008 parade if they persist on having a see-through tank next year. And yes, you are right in suggesting employees stop chewing their nails.

In February, actor Chuck Norris will announce he is running for vice president with any far rightwing candidate who will accept him. Al-Qaida will issue a fatwa against this action and Hillary will call it another rightwing conspiracy.

By the way, Hillary Clinton and Oprah Winfrey will mud wrestle at the annual black and white tie event titled "2008 Yo Mamma Mud Queen" held at Madison Square Garden. Don't miss it!

In March, Larry Rogers and Buz Dotson will compete for the position of Easter Bunny for the Highlands Easter Parade. Hank Ross will protest, stating he is cuter than both those guys. I agree. A small group of persistent Highlanders will march on Main Street with banners that proclaim "Roger Rabbit for Easter Bunny" giving Larry the edge.

In May, the two-hour parking restrictions will be lengthened to 8-hour parking restrictions and only enforced between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. daily, Sundays included. Hmmm!

The judge who will eventually hear the Larry and Michael Gantenbein illegal drug trafficking case is still in law school.

Starving local Realtors will meet at a secret location and agree to recalibrate their altimeters to 500 feet higher than they really are. Everyone will be shocked to find most Realtors had already done that so they will agree to recalibrate at 1,000 feet. What do flatlanders know anyhow?

Local attorney Lenny Baer will publish a best seller titled "Learning Bridge My Way" and then form a club focused on kicking all the good players out of Highlands. I'm with ya, Lenny!

In February, our honorable Mayor, Don Mullen, will put on a happy face and agree to everything voted on by the new Town Board. He will be trained at the Buck Trott (a.k.a. Trout) promise them anything school of agreement and happy face. Good luck, Buck!

A group of surveyors, pouring over old maps and surveys, will determine that Highlands is actually located in Rabun County, GA. Macon County commissioners will panic, hold an emergency meeting and ask, "Where is Highlands, anyway?"

Local churches in Highlands will learn that television was originally invented by a Mormon named Philo T. Farnsworth. They will ban television from all Christian homes and issue a fatwa, proclaiming "Be leery of people named Philo." Next, they will ban all recipes containing "philo dough" thinking it is a plan to collect money for the Mormons. (Oy, vey is mir!)

And finally, the persistent rumor that John Cleaveland was circumcised with pinkie sheers will be proven untrue. I'm certainly relieved.

Bhutto's death may rally moderates

The assassination of former Pakistani prime minister and opposition leader Benazir Bhutto came as a shock, but should have been no surprise. This was the second attempt on her life since her return from exile, the first occurred last October. Whatever truth there may have been to charges of corruption against Bhutto and her husband, her death is a tragedy for the already unstable country. Bhutto was the first woman elected to lead a Muslim country, and given the rise of Islamic fundamentalism, it may be centuries before another emerges.

The fact that Bhutto was elected Pakistan's leader not once, but twice, speaks to the secular nature of Pakistan. It remains to be seen if moderate Muslims in her country can stand up to a growing fanatic minority determined to establish an Islamic state similar to Afghanistan under the Taliban.

At the moment, the best hope for stability rests with the continued rule of President Musharraf. There is considerable doubt that he will be able to withstand the tide of fundamentalism. We don't want the establishment of a Taliban-like government in Pakistan, but that is what democratic elections might produce, if not today, within a few years. Such is the appeal of the message of Islamic fundamentalism to millions of Muslims in the world today.

Pakistan's voters would probably opt for a continued secular state, but they lack the passion for democracy that characterizes the western democracies. It is the Islamists who are willing to die, and to send others to their deaths. It is the Islamists who are willing to kill and be killed to destabilize the government. Riots and demonstrations followed Bhutto's death last week. What is uncertain is the number of Pakistanis willing to risk death to keep alive the ideal of democracy. An element of ambivalence certainly exists, abhorrence for the slaughter of innocent people on the one hand, pride in the promise of Muslim domination on the other. I suspect that many moderate Pakistanis harbor pride in the dedication, if not the methods, of the fundamentalists. I remember that no Muslim leader could be found to unconditionally condemn the attacks of September 11, 2001.

Al Qaeda has claimed responsibility for the murder, and it is difficult to imagine a conspiracy between the Islamists and the Musharraf government. Still, complicity by some in the military or government is possible, even likely. Infiltration of the military by militants is a near certainty. Musharraf may well have seen Bhutto as a greater immediate threat to his rule than the more remote threat posed by the radicals. If this was his assessment, he may have permitted or encouraged the assassination. Perhaps time will unravel the web of events, perhaps not. Remember, even in the freest, most open country in the world, many believe the official explanation of a lone gunman in the murder of President Kennedy. What is undeniable is that Pakistan is less secure than it was a week ago, and that the region and the world are less secure.

There was hope for the world if a predominately Muslim country would vote a woman to power in 2008. She had the courage and the sense of purpose to return from a comfortable exile in Dubai to risk death in her homeland. Her passion for democracy demanded that she accept the near certainty of attempted attempts on her life. Whatever her flaws, she was the greatest force to inspire moderate Muslims to make the sacrifices necessary to restore democracy, order, and sanity to one vital corner of the Middle East.

It is our hope that her courage and sacrifice will rally moderates in the Muslim world. It is unfortunately more likely that her death will leave them cowering before the forces of repression and regression.

Upper Chattooga River environmental assessment coming in February

The U.S. Forest Service is releasing a pre-decisional Environmental Assessment (EA) of recreation uses on the upper Chattooga River in February. The agency had planned to release the EA this month.

"The agency is working diligently to prepare the EA for public review," said Sumter National Forest Supervisor Jerome Thomas. "As anyone familiar with this subject knows, the issues being considered in this EA are wide-ranging and complex; we need additional time to complete our analysis."

The EA will be available for a 30-day comment period in February and will be posted on the Francis Marion and Sumter National Forests' web site at <http://www.fs.fed.us/r8/fms> where additional background information can be found as well.

Eschatology

Katie Brugger
k-brugger@hotmail.com

This may be a strange topic to start the new year with, but it's something I have been thinking about for some time now. Eschatology is the branch of theology that is concerned with the end of the world or of humankind, but the word
can also mean a belief concerning ultimate or final things, such as the destiny of humanity.

I first started thinking about this last year when I realized that, when pondering the consequences of global warming I was very pessimistic about humanity's chances for survival. I was envisioning end-times, but from an environmental cause, not a religious one.

How could I envision the end of the human race so dispassionately? The more I thought about it, the more clear it became that envisioning end-times is a pretty common human trait.

Of course Christians are an obvious example. Almost as soon as Jesus was dead his disciples were looking for him to return and bring an end to this earthly kingdom. When that didn't happen the belief developed that the millennium spoken of in Revelation meant that Jesus would come again in the year 1000. I once read that just before midnight on Dec. 31, 999 the Pope was lying on his face in front of an altar expecting the end to come at any minute. I wonder how long it took before he gave up. (I was actually disappointed that there wasn't more craziness in the buildup to the second millennium; all we got was the Y2K bug.)

Among many present-day Christians
the Rapture is a fondly hoped for event, even though there will be plenty of people "left behind" as the select are transported to heaven.

Other religions also have their own forms of eschatological theology; Jews and Muslims both believe in a future messianic age, while Hindus and Buddhists believe in cycles of creation and destruction.

People in the new-age community are hoping for a transformative moment that will raise the awareness of everyone on the planet sufficiently to usher in a new age of peace and harmony.

A popular theory is this awakening will happen in the year 2012. This is reputed to be the year that completes the thirteenth cycle in the Long Count of the Mayan calendar (on December 21, to be exact). NASA (not exactly a new-age institution) predicts the Sun will reverse its magnetic poles during 2012. I'm not quite sure how these two things will bring about an awakening, but if you'd like to learn more, there are plenty of websites (for example,

www.survive2012.com)

Peter Russell, a British physicist, provides a logical premise for a coming awakening in his book The White Hole in Time (revised version called Waking Up In Time). His premise is that evolution is accelerating; we can see it clearly in the increasing acceleration of technological development. He suggests that we are heading towards an evolutionary singularity, the "white hole in time" which will bring about some kind of extraordinary change.

I have been surprised in conversation with friends to find eschatological thinking is common in the environmental community. These people long for the day when humans have been wiped out by their stupidity and the earth can recover from the effects of our depredations.

I found more examples of end-of-theworldism in the January 2008 issue of Harper's Magazine, in a review of books on secularism. ("Faith in Reason: Secular fantasies of a godless age," by John Gray)
Mr. Gray describes utopianism and Marxism as philosophies built upon the "millenarian belief anticipating a violent rupture in history that would be followed by a new world": the old world of greed and strife would be transformed into a new one of equality and cooperation. Mr.
Gray cites The End of History and the Last Man, by Francis Fukuyama, as an example of end-time thinking in the modern political sphere.

Finally, it seems to me that this common belief in the end of time is implicit in the standard middle-aged complaint, "What's wrong with this younger generation?" Every generation seems to think the following one is somehow worse than their own, lazier, less concerned with things of importance (family, religion, etc.), and because of these traits the younger generation is sure to bring about the ruin of the race.

Why is eschatological thinking so common? I asked some people their opinion. One person answered that perhaps the human race collectively works better under pressure, and when we think the world's about to end we're willing to put out a little more effort.

Our disastrous, Canadian future

Far from denigrating Canadians, I begin with high praise for one Canadian. I never miss the byline of Mark Steyn. He is a Canadian, living in New Hampshire, who publishes frequent articles in Canada, in the US, in Great Britain, and in Australia, and elsewhere.

Steyn combines humor, excellent research and powerful logic in articles on politics, philosophy and culture. He would be a lock to win the annual H.L. Mencken Award, except for its requirement that the winners be born in the US. But today's subject centers on his latest best-selling book, "America Alone."

One chapter in that book, entitled "The Future Belongs to Islam," was republished in Macleans' magazine, which is the Canadian equivalent to Time magazine. The Canadian Islamic Conference (CIC) filed a complaint against Steyn and Macleans' accusing them of "exposing Canadian Muslims to hatred and Islamophobia."

CIC is in Canada what the Council on American-Islamic Relations (CAIR) is in the US. CAIR has threatened and taken assorted actions in court in the US similar to what CIC has done in Canada. However, CIC's complaint against Steyn and Macleans' in the Canadian Human Rights Commission (HRC).

Unlike courts, the HRC is staffed by laymen, not judges. Its members tend to be members of assorted groups who are, or claim they are, discriminated against. Judicial rules are not used; for instance, hearsay is admitted. There is no presumption of innocence. Possible bias on the part of witnesses is ignored. Complainants get help for free; respondents have to pay their own fees and costs.

As you may have gathered, this is a stacked deck. And finally, the broad Canadian press and most of its citizens have noticed that the HRC is not serving to improve Canadian society, but is a blackmail process that inhibits freedom of speech, religion and the press.

Could such things happen here in the US? After all, we have our First Amendment, which most nations do not have. It guarantees our freedoms in those and other areas. Yet, what is happening in Canada today, is a sample of where we are headed.

Most of the decisions of the HRC are rendered in the interests of ending discrimination or prejudice. But they are

Michelle Mead & John Armor
michiemead@aol.com
John_Armor@yale.edu

really about groups that claim they have been offended. Some judges and bureaucrats in the US are going down the same path, giving recovery for individuals who claim they are offended on behalf of their group.

It really would be a good idea for such people, their lawyers, but especially bureaucrats and judges, to read the text of the Constitution. Nowhere in that document does it guarantee each of us freedom from being offended. And people and groups who ride on that idea are not defending American ideals, they are attacking them, especially attacking the Constitution itself.

The process here is also similar to that in Canada. In venues from mass demonstrations to complaints in court, representatives of assorted groups claim discrimination. And if they win their cases in court, they claim attorneys fees and costs. Often, they offer witnesses whose careers consist of complaining and gaining money. And last, in many instances, the complaints are made against smaller cities, smaller school boards, or individuals who lack resources to fight back against their accusers.

In this aspect, the complaint against Steyn and Macleans' are atypical. They have the wherewith all to fight back. They will not fold under pressure regardless of the merits of their case. Many of the cases in the US are brought against financially-weaker defendants, and the defendants cave rather than face the possibility of having their budgets gut-shot by the fees and costs extracted by the Complainants – often represented by the ACLU.

In Canada, as in the US, the environment that sacrifices real freedoms on the altar of false equality was created by legislation deliberately passed by their Parliament and our Congress. The legislation was written with apparent good intentions. But the results have been the opposite of the intentions.

The Steyn matter in Canada shows us our future, unless we change course. And, that future ain't pretty.

Many of the facts for this article were drawn from LifeSite.com at this address: <http://www.lifesite.net/ldn/2007/dec/07121902.html>. The legal conclusions, however, are mine.

Very Annie Mary

The British (well, Welsh, actually) comedy/drama with elements cute, dark and strange, starring Rachel Griffiths (Me Myself I), Jonathan Pryce (Brazil, Tomorrow Never Dies), Ioan Gruffudd (Amazing Grace, Fantastic Four) Matthew Rhys (Match Point). Directed by: Sara Sugarman (Confessions of a Teenage Drama Queen, Escape from Sobodor). Original music by Stephen Warbeck, the rest by Village People and Luciano Pavarotti, and other artists like them. Not rated, but the equivalent of PG 13.

The Storyline: Annie Mary Pugh is a woman with a dream, a very big dream. Which is a very good thing, because reality is not that great.

Annie Mary (an inspired performance by Griffiths, cute and twisted) is, to put it charitably, a little awkward, a little prone walking into doors or falling down. She has had a few high points, winning a prize in opera, (the whole family has been singers) but that was a few decades ago.

She might be a little more confident if her dad (Pryce is both funny and nasty in this role) didn't tell her she was pathetic quite so often.

So, she lives her quiet life in the bucolic village of Ogw, waiting for good things to happen. And lo' and behold, something good does happen, when her father suffers a devastating stroke. Annie Mary acquires a bit more independence, a bit more courage, and a some confidence to perform again in a talent show in the big city of Cardiff. You sort of get the feeling that some how, most things are going to work out along they way, but not before a few genuinely tear jerking moments, more than a few laughs, and impending disaster.

All the characters are strange, light (even Pryce as the belittling father doesn't come across as evil, just thoughtless), in an eccentric, small town way, and all just a little flawed, but only a bit. A funny, odd, and terrific performance by all the principals, and none are afraid to look a little stupid for the sake of the story.

Stuart of
The Movie Stop

There is a small amount of message, but no more than you'd want in a comic film. A good mix of the silly and clever, that British film does so well (British actors seem more willing to look silly for the sake of the story than Americans). Great performance by all, but clearly Griffiths show, and it shows a range of her considerable abilities. A great pick for those who dream of performing.

A few more British comic gems are Janice Beard, Mrs. Henderson Presents, Widows Peak, Billy Elliot, and the brilliant and hysterical Kinky Boots.

These and about 5,000 others are available for sale or rent at Movie Stop Video, stop on by and take a look.

Maybe this is how he works best, but I don't find it a satisfactory answer.

Another gave the answer that had first occurred to me, "It's an easy way to get out of the problems confronting us, both personally and collectively." If I think the human race is already toast from global warming (to quote an eminent scientist, James Lovelock) then why bother doing any of the hard work required to clean up our polluting behavior? If the year of spiritual transformation is quickly approaching and all of us will be changed anyway, then why bother trying to be a better person now? Why not just wait for the easy fix?

My husband once began a song on this topic entitled, "You're Not Going To Get Out of it That Easy."

I have come to the conclusion that our end-of-the-world thinking is just another reflection of the fact that life is hard and most of us crave a magical resolution. End-times equal happy-times. As I wrote last Thanksgiving, "It is easy to fall into the trap of seeing life as a burden. We get so busy with work and family and paying bills it's not surprising so many people believe happiness is only possible by escaping their life — whether it be on vacation or in heaven (a sort of permanent vacation)."

• CONSERVATIVE POV •

The year in the rear-view mirror.

It was a dark and stormy night, early in 2007, lightning shattered the night sky and thunder rumbled through the darkness. It was as if the Heavens were foretelling a disaster of historic proportions. And alas, so it was, for the very next day, Nancy "Dimbulb" Pelosi was named Speaker of the House, and Harry "Dimwit" Reid was chosen to be Senate Majority Leader. From that day forward, the ineptitude became manifest and the embarrassment built to a dizzying nadir to the point that Congress had a lower approval rating than O. J. Simpson.

2007 will be non-remembered as the year of the hair-brained bimette. Kicked off by Paris Hilton, a succession of young ladies engaged in what would appear to be a competition of downright stupidity. Paris' rap sheet of driving infractions makes one dizzy. In January, she pleaded guilty to an alcohol-related reckless driving charge and was given 36 months probation. No sooner had she exited the courtroom than she was pulled over on a suspended license charge. No penalty reported. On February 27th, she was caught doing 70 in a 35 zone, again with a suspended license. Oh, and no headlights on at night. Violated probation. Sentenced to jail, Sheriff Lee Baca mysteriously said she could serve 40 days home-confinement instead. Evidently, the sentencing judge didn't agree and Paris went to the clink. Grandpa Baron recently minimized her inheritance. Poor baby.

Lindsay Lohan, after being involved in multiple automobile incidents in 2004-2006, in January checked herself into rehab for the first of three times in 2007.

Her stint in the "Wonderland Center" didn't seem to accomplish the purpose as she was arrested in May for putting her car into a curb while DUI, whereupon the cops found cocaine in the car.

Since the Wonderland experience didn't do the trick, she entered the "Promises" rehabilitation facility in Malibu and stayed for 45 days. Eleven days after leaving Promises, Lindsay was again arrested for DUI, possession and transportation of cocaine and driving while suspended. Off to the "Cirque Lodge" in Sundance, Utah. Oh yeah, that'll work. Enough of her.

On to Britney, the Queen of Morons. The short list of her 2007 problems: she checked into rehab before she checked out a few hours later; shaved off her hair;

Don Swanson
Feedback is encouraged. Email swansonson@dn.net another rehab, in and out and back in; attacked reporters with an umbrella; ran over somebody's feet, charged with hit-and-run; left the house without her panties; all this while carrying on a custody battle with her ex (? is he ex yet?).

So, how is Brit's sister, Jamie Lynn, going to compete with all that? By getting her 16-year-old self preggers, that's how. The Nickelodeon star is now setting the example to young girls as to how one achieves notoriety, which seems to be their goal in life. A disaster to our society, just when we didn't need another.

On January 10th, President Bush announced a change of strategy in the Iraq war.

The Surge, which required the addition of 20,000+ troops to be inserted into the war zone, was met by fierce opposition by liberal leaders, calling it a failure before it had, for all practical purposes, begun. Now that even reporters and liberals have admitted that it is a success in the making, and the American body count is way down (to their dismay), establishing an end-date certain seems to have lost its luster.

Not that it came as a great surprise, but the fact still chilled one to the bone. On January 20th, the Hilldabeast announced the formation of a presidential exploratory committee. To make matters worse, even though Iowa, New Hampshire and South Carolina are extremely close, she holds commanding leads in Michigan and Florida, each state having more delegates than the other three combined. Nationally, she leads big. If, by some horrible twist of fate, she becomes president (shudder), you can forget about the U.S. continuing to be a world power. If she has a cooperative Congress, she will finish us in her first term.

Good grief, we're not out of January's events, and the column is almost over.

2007 seems to be a year of dissatisfaction, displeasure with government, (Bush 35%, Congress 25%), the economy (recession ahead? - I doubt it), education (a disaster), the fabric of our society being torn by rampant immorality, moral bankruptcy abounds.

Don, I thought conservatives were supposed to be optimistic, seeing the glass half full. This is a time that tries men's souls. We have been through gloomy times before and God has mercifully pulled us out of the muck. Pray He will again.

... VOTERS continued from pg. 1

38-34 in a December poll. Interestingly Barack Obama has earned very little support from people likely to vote in the Democratic primary in the region, always finishing well behind Clinton and Edwards among WNC voters.

For the Republicans, Fred Thompson was the top candidate for most of 2007 but his standing has fallen to third. Mike Huckabee, who recently visited western North Carolina, took a large lead over Rudy Giuliani in the most recent poll. Huckabee had 34% to 19% for Giuliani among Republicans in the mountains who responded.

Edwards and Huckabee might be the most popular candidates with each of their parties, but the candidate who would fare best in a general election in WNC is Rudy Giuliani. Public Policy Polling tested nine possible matchups for the presidency and found that he would lead Hillary Clinton and Barack Obama by large margins in the region if either of them was the Democratic nominee. Giuliani's lead over Edwards was just 51-44, and the poll showed that the former senator from North Carolina would beat either Mike Huckabee or Mitt Romney in the mountains if either of them ended up being the choice of the Republicans.

In the Democratic race for Governor, Lieutenant Governor Bev Perdue had a big lead in the region over Treasurer Richard Moore in September but has seen the margin decline every month since to the point that Moore led Perdue 35-30 in the December poll. So far Perdue has led all of the polls on a statewide level. Neither of the candidates has shown much interest or spent much time traveling to western North Carolina so far during the campaign so the region is probably up for grabs to the candidate who works harder to court the support of mountain voters in 2008.

One candidate who has been traveling regularly to the region is senator Fred Smith, one of the Republican candidates for Governor, who has attended numerous BBQs on his behalf in small towns over the last few months. After finishing third behind opponents Bill Graham and Bob Orr in our September poll, Smith has taken the lead by increasingly greater margins in our last three polls. Traveling to places like Brevard, Robbinsville, and Marion has clearly helped his standing with WNC Republicans.

Several Democratic candidates from western North Carolina seeking statewide office are getting a good deal of support from voters in their neck of the woods. Buncombe County commissioner David Young, who is running for Treasurer, has been basically tied in the statewide polls with his main opponent, senator Janet Cowell from Wake County. But in the mountain region, Young has a significant lead.

Another statewide candidate from the area is Canton mayor Pat Smathers, who is seeking the office of Lieutenant Governor. He has been running a narrow second in the polls behind senator Walter Dalton of Rutherford County, but has received the greatest amount of support from his home region in most of our polls.

It's early but it is clear that from the top of the ballot on down the way western North Carolina votes could have a significant impact on who wins the statewide races next year. As a region where neither Democrats or Republicans dominate the vote, candidates in close races will need to take it seriously to come out on top.

Highlands' 2007 Year-in-Review

January

Town says no antique show at Rec Park

The Highlands Playhouse will have to find another home for its antique show this year. After much discussion among members of the board and input from citizens at the board meeting, the motion to allow the Playhouse to use the Civic Center September 2007 failed 3-2.

Zoning Administrator arrested & jailed

Highlands Zoning Administrator Larry Gantenbein, 60, and his son Michael, 35, of Good Year Tire and Auto are in jail in St. Tammany Parish, LA, facing charges of possession with intent to distribute, manufacture and cultivate marijuana. On Jan. 5, at 3:53 p.m., while en route to Highlands from the west coast, the Gantenbein vehicle was pulled over for improper lane use by Louisiana State Police on Interstate 12 eastbound at mile post 59 on the border of Mandeville and Covington, LA. After several continuations, the case will be heard in February.

Affordable housing plans begin

Affordable housing is one thing Highlands can't seem to offer its residents, but over the next several months, a newly appointed committee will seek ways to remedy that situation.

School board outlines facilities' needs

On Monday, Jan. 8, at a special called school board meeting, members discussed plans for improving Macon County school facilities over the next five years.

Land trusts protect 1,000 acres in area

Conservation easements on property, such as this land in Horse Cove, are an effective conservation tool that allows owners to continue to own their property, protect it from future development, and earn a federal and a North Carolina tax credit. Nearly half of the 225,000 acres protected by Land Trusts in North Carolina are conservation easements. In Highlands and Cashiers, easements have led to the protection of nearly 1,000 acres. See story page 10.

County wants $400,000 to upgrade landfill

The landfill on Rich Gap Road is changing to a transfer station July 2007 which means big changes for Highlands. Stahl said regulations mandated by DENR have made the landfill operation obsolete. He said the cost of changes to continue operations as they are at Rich Gap would be astronomical. The town has decided to pay the money but asked the county to waive the tipping fees for three years.

Redefining of duties a possible at Town Hall

Suddenly, Highlands has outgrown its bitches and town officials realize what fit in the past might not fit now. "We need to analyze what we're doing in some areas," said Commissioner Herb James. "We're getting larger and larger but we don't staff. The county at least staffs their government." With that in mind, the Town Board recently established a Town Organization Review Committee and charged it to take a hard look at the organization of Highlands' government. Commissioners continue to discuss the matter.

February

MS B-ball has first winning season in 4 years (photo)

Middle school boys and girls haven't won more than half their games since this year's senior class was in eighth grade! But this season both teams won more than half. The teams played in the Jackson County Conference during the season but since they were not approved to play in that tournament,

Boys win tournament & conference title

Highlands hosted the 2006-2007 Little Smoky Mountain Conference Tournament for the first time in school history. The Highlanders were crowned regular season champions with a 5-1 record as well as tournament champions with wins over Blue Ridge (60-35) and Hiwassee Dam (69-56).

Area youths questioned about break-ins

A discovery by the Thompson family when they came up from Griffin, GA for a weekend at their second home instigated an investigation which quickly ended a series of break-ins in the Mirror Lake community. No arrests have been made, but Highlands Police are questioning three youths in connection with breaking and entering with larceny of 14 homes on Wyanoak, Hickory Hill, Chowan roads and Vinca Lane which occurred Feb. 16 and 17. Taken were food items, alcoholic beverages, a radio, CD player and a laptop computer.

BOE member resigns

The Macon County School Board's most recent addition – Guy Gooder – has resigned. "It is with much deliberation that I submit my resignation effective immediately. After being involved with this board and staff I have found it is not in my best interest or the interest of the constituency that elected me to office to further my term," wrote Gooder in his resignation letter.

March

Gantenbeins plead not-guilty to charges

Larry Gantenbein, 60, and his son Michael, 35, were arraigned in the Covington, LA, St. Tammany Parish courtroom of Judge Reggie Badeaux, Monday, Feb. 26. Both men plead not-guilty to charges of possession with intent to distribute, manufacture and cultivate marijuana.

Audit shows hospital on the upswing

Despite the apparent descent of Highlands-Cashiers Hospital last year, all indicators point to a hospital slowly climbing out of its fiscal and operational hole. Though most hospitals, particularly small acute-care hospitals lose money on the operations side, the board of directors and President Ken Shull are determined to prove statistics wrong. "My goal is to get our operations loss to zero in 18 months," he said last week during an audit review.

Rib Shack bar OK'd

There's been much talk about a proposed bar at The Rib Shack restaurant on Spring Street. Now it's official. Very soon patrons can order a martini with their ribs. Wednesday, March 14, the Zoning Board unanimously approved the required Special Use Permit to expand The Rib Shack to include a bar. The only contingency is verification of the parcel's built-upon percentage. The built-upon allowance is 70 percent; the built-upon is 65 percent.

Smaller hi-rise planned for U.S. 64 tract

The dust has settled concerning the transaction of property on U.S. 64 east where a high-rise condominium complex was planned. Now, the buyer is ready to move forward with his plans for Highland Views. Though a cloud still exists on the 19-acre deed regarding the allowance of multi-story condominium structures there, Friday, March 16, Developer Bill Shephard closed on the two original tracts for a total of 21-plus acres. On the front 1.3 acres – the tract without a cloud on the deed — a four-story building housing 23, three-bedroom, 2,400-2,600 sq. ft. condominium units is planned.

April

Board approves RiverWalk changes

RiverWalk appears to be on the mend. With approved soil and erosion controls in place and working, the emotion associated with the project has dissipated. Attorney for RiverWalk, Billy Clarke was at the Town Board meeting to request an extension of RiverWalk's preliminary plat which technically expired November 2006.

New project planned near VZ Top

Developers for a proposed development on top of VZ Top got the go-ahead from the Town Board. Ray McPhail and Will Stolz appeared before the Planning Board twice before going to the Town Board Wednesday night for ultimate approval of their preliminary subdivision plat and for three variances. Six homes on an 11.77 acre knoll above the VZ Top condominiums are planned and will be incorporated on the old Smathers estate. The six lots vary in size from 1.174 acres to 2.223 acres.

Clustering still an issue

The concept of clustering continues to elude clarification, but two other ordinances passed unanimously. At the April 4 Town Board meeting, Town Attorney Bill Coward spotted irregularities and ambiguous statements in the proposed ordinance and suggested it be re-worked once more before adoption.

Commissioners agree to revenue neutral budget but not the rate

Citizens wearing stickers and waiving miniature signs proclaiming "MIL LIMIT 25" packed the board room, lined the walls and spilled into the hallway for the Macon County Courthouse Monday night. But the cry for a revenue neutral budget to be set at the 25 millage rate wasn't to be, at least not yet.

County's height ordinance on temporary hold

Just as county planners were crossing the finish line with the Building Height Ordinance the commission put on the brakes. The problem? No distinction in the ordinance between height restrictions for commercial and multi-family projects versus single-family residences.

Easter eggs in the snow at the Rec Park

Bundled in winter outfits, families with children in tow gathered at the Rec Park on a cold April 7 morning for the annual Easter egg hunt. Despite the 27 degrees and the dusting of snow, every egg was found.

ETJ reps subject of closed session

Once back in open session, the board verified the discussion about ongoing litigation between the town and the county concerning the means of determining the number of ETJ representatives on town boards and their duties. It also discussed the legal ramifications of amending Section 2-67 of the Highlands Code. "The only change to what has actually taken place concerning representation is that the exact method of determining proportional representation is spelled out in detail — same as the brief the Town filed," said Town Administrator Richard Betz. "And that it clearly says ETJ members can participate in all Planning Board and Zoning Board matters — which they have been doing anyway."

County prepares for bond referendum

County commissioners have taken the first step in preparation for a possible bond referendum on the November ballot. At the April 24 Macon County Commission continuation meeting, a resolution declaring the county's intent to reimburse itself from the proceeds of one or more tax exempt financings for expenditures made in connection with the 2007 county facility bond referendum was passed unanimously. The maximum principal amount of the financings is estimated at $70 million. "This represents the maximum figure the bond can be but it can be less," said County Attorney Lesley Mosley.

New planters to line Main St. 3rd to 5th

With parking on Main Street a premium, merchants were alarmed when town workers began replacing the old planters with a larger revised version last Friday. Town Engineer Lamar Nix says the planters are configured differently than before and will eventually house a fuller tree, garbage cans and perhaps a bench. Taking the garbage cans off the sidewalk will make pedestrian passage easier.

May

King & Queen for the night!

Seniors Toni Schmitt and Jason Aspinwall were crowned Queen and King at the Highlands School Junior-Senior Prom Saturday night at the Performing Arts Center. See page 12 for more photos.

Alcohol permits required of nonprofits

Just as the season is opening in Highlands, a damper of sorts has been put on the bevy of nonprofit functions offering alcohol and wine as part of their venue. "One-time permits allowing alcohol are required for each function even if the drinks are free," said Police Chief Bill Harrell. Evidently, the N.C. Alcohol Beverage Control Commission put the word out about two weeks ago when representatives learned that alcohol was being offered at nonprofit functions in town.

Commission dissatisfied with 'Plaza' look

The Highlands Plaza face lift hasn't turned out the way it was presented to the Appearance Commission back in October 2006 and members are concerned. At the May 7 meeting, members said Al Bolt, who represented his mother who owns the Highlands Plaza property, indicated that the façade of the existing plaza would be upgraded to match the Car Spa.

Citizens voice ideas for Pine Street Park

About 30 people attended the Pine Street Park Public Meeting, May 7, and enthusiastically submitted their opinions for the park.

HS Band wins big in GA

This past Saturday the high school band took their first trip to a music festival at "Music in the Parks" at Six Flags Over Georgia and did an outstanding job. They performed at Chapel Hill High School in Douglasville, GA, and received a rating of Excellent which is the second highest rating. The students played better than anyone expected, got some great comments from the judges, and received the band's first trophy. The group spent the rest of the day in Six Flags Over Georgia. Pictured at Highlands School is Band Teacher Kristina Kirchner with her high school students.

Town to get promised Rec Park funds

After a prolonged locking of horns, the county has authorized the payment of 2006-2007 Rec Park funds to the town of Highlands. Some years ago, the county agreed to continue to give the town $500,000 a year to help fund operational costs associated with the Rec Park. Trouble began when the Town Board asked the county to consider increasing the allocation due to a general increase in "the cost of doing business."

Firm to take over pole plant audit

McGavran Engineering's proposal to perform a pole attachment and general system review of Highlands' pole plant got the green light Wednesday night with a 4 to 1 vote. At the May 2 Town Board meeting, commissioners deferred their decision on contracting with McGavran pending a reference check of the engineering firm. Commissioner Alan Marsh checked several references and learned that the firm comes highly recommended and municipalities who contract with it see a substantial financial gain in their pole attachee business.

New millage rate decreased to 24.5 cents

The county's proposed budget for 2007-2008 was presented to the Macon County Board of Commissioners Monday night and it revolves tightly around the revenue neutral tax rate of 24.5 cents per $100 valuation. Members in the audience, who have lobbied long and hard for a mill rate of 25 cents — including the waving of miniature "Mil Limit 25" on sticks at meetings — were pleasantly surprised

Recent accident raises concern about traffic

A flurry of vehicular and pedestrian traffic this past Memorial Day weekend, has brought attention to Highlands' busy Main Street. On May 26 at 2 p.m., a motorist hit a stroller being pushed by pedestrians across the Third and Main streets crosswalk. Though no one was seriously injured and the youngsters were released from Highlands-Cashiers

June

Highlands' 2007 Year-in-Review

County has plans for 'room tax' funds

The county's budget message, which was presented to the commission at its May meeting, lays the groundwork for many changes coming to Macon County. A change that will affect the Highlands and Franklin Chambers of Commerce, is the Economic Development Commission's (EDC) recommendation to revise the disbursement of the county's room tax money.

Valedictorian & Salutatorian of Class of 2007 named

At the Highlands School Award Ceremony, Monday, June 4, Chase Jenkins was named Valedictorian and Lucy Herz was named Salutatorian of the senior class. Jenkins will be attending UNC-Chapel Hill and Herz will be attending Columbia University. With them is Highlands School Principal Brian Jetter.

County not releasing rec park funds

The recreation funds promised Highlands at the May Macon County Commission meeting will be held up a bit longer. At the end of last month's meeting, the commission agreed to release the remaining $425,000 – not the $500,000 Highlands expected — with an explanation. During 2006-2007 budget year, the county allocated $100,000 for the Pine Street Park and bought property to expand parking at Zachary Field for $150,000. The amount of $425,000 is what's left of the $675,000 in recreational funds earmarked for Highlands.

Outdoor merchandise under attack

As has been the case recently, another town ordinance has surfaced to haunt. At the June 6 Town Board meeting, Town Administrator Richard Betz told the board that numerous violations of the town's "Outdoor Display of Merchandise" ordinance were going on about town.

102 years and counting

Irene Picklesimer James turned 102 on June 12. At a family birthday party held at her home, she was surrounded by children, grandchildren, great grandchildren, daughters-in-laws, son-in-laws and friends. Irene is following in the footsteps of her aunt Albie McCall, of the McCall cabin fame, who lived to be 103.

Restaurant parking threatened

At the June 13 Zoning Board meeting, Interim Zoning Administrator Richard Betz said the department has been investigating parking for Fressers Restaurant and Don Leon Café as it applies to Furniture South parking across the street.

Highlands town tax rate to drop

Thanks to Macon County's increased property values, Highlands residents will see a reduction in the town's tax rate from 19 cents per $100 valuation to 13.5 cents. At a special budget work session meeting Thursday, June 14, commissioners put finishing touches on the proposed 2007-2008 budget which will be accepted at the June 27 meeting as required by General Statute.

Passage of ordinance paves way for construction

The moratorium on multi-story buildings has been cancelled and effective immediately, the height of new buildings in Macon County is capped at 50 feet. During the public hearing on the Building Height Ordinance at the June 18 Macon County Commission meeting, 10 residents – two Franklin and eight from Highlands – spoke in favor of the ordinance.

Interns identify new streams

Armed with verification as to their existence, the commissioners can now take steps to protect 10 more perennial streams which empty into Big Creek – the town's primary water source.

Town Hall complex plans unveiled

The concept of a town government complex is beginning to solidify as it would relate to Pine Street Park, Main Street, and a visitor center. At the special

June 27 Town Board meeting, architects Mitch Sorin of Sorin Architecture and John Fisher of Fisher Architects explained their idea of a 10,000 sq. ft., two-story town government building.

Wild things living amongst us

For the second time this year, this Bobcat has come calling at the Franken residence on Rainbow Road off Clear Creek. In January, as he was getting ready to go to a basketball game, John Franken looked out his bedroom window and saw the cat amble across his yard. Then on June 14, John was standing in the yard grilling when their 14-year-old dog started growling. John turned around and about 50 feet away across the road that runs along the property was the Bobcat. This time he ran inside and grabbed a camera.

July

Home-biz OK'd for R1-ETJ

At its Wednesday night meeting, the Town Board finally put to rest the issue of home-occupations in the R1-ETJ. Both the Planning Board and the Town Board have been battling the issue around for months.

Fate of outdoor merchandise still hanging

Years ago the town drew up an ordinance prohibiting the display of outdoor merchandise. Now, with Code Enforcement Officer Josh Ward ready to enforce ordinances left unattended for years, the ambiguity of the wording has come back to haunt.

Highlands School gets Asst. Principal

An assistant principal for Highlands School has been named. At the July 23 Macon County School Board meeting, the board agreed to employ, James Draheim, formerly of Gwinnett County Public Schools Shiloh Middle School, as Assistant Principal at Highlands School. He begins Aug. 1.

Bond to be set at $64 million

At two work sessions – one held Thursday night and one held Sunday afternoon and evening – Macon County Commissioners prioritized facilities requests to determine the bond referendum that will be on the ballot in November. Though a $70 million bond referendum was planned, by the time facilities requests were tallied the figure jumped to $85 million. But once commissioners prioritized needs, it fell to $64 million.

Riverwalk building phases 1 & 2

Motorists traveling down U.S. 64 east have undoubtedly noticed a change at the Riverwalk subdivision. The main entrance is paved. Paving hopefully culminates an on-going battle with soil erosion and officials at the local and state level.

August

Officials say flood plain ordinance crucial. Structural damage due to last week's flash flooding accentuated the dangers of building and living in the floodplains of rivers and streams in Macon County.

County-run Rec Park a maybe

The newly formed countywide recreation commission is ready to get to work. At its first meeting Monday, July 30, the six representatives from Franklin, Nantahala and Highlands met with Macon County Commission liaison Bob Simpson to appoint chairman Matt Bullis, whose volunteer position is advisory. The countywide recreation program director hasn't been hired, yet.

New school programs aim to keep students engaged

As students progress through the education system, the flame ignited that first day of Kindergarten risks being extinguished by the everydayness of the learning process. Bad grades, personality conflicts, problems at home, learning disabilities and other factors all eat away at a student's ability to succeed at school.

Rules about fire alarm and mutual aid responses change

Automatic fire alarms are becoming an increased burden on fire departments and their automatic aid departments. In 2006 the Highlands Fire & Rescue Department responded to 396 calls – 35 more than in 2005 – with the increase coming in the fire and related category which had a total of 263 calls – 55 more than last year. There were 82 fire alarms.

Board OKs restaurant parking

The parking saga concerning Fressers Eatery and Don Leon's Café is over, at least for now. At the Aug. 8 Zoning Board meeting, members ruled in favor of reissuing both restaurants' Special Use Permits (SUPs) and allowing the continued use of remote parking at Furniture South across N.C. 106.

Voters to decide on real estate transfer tax

Joining the five bond questions on the November 6 ballot, will be questions about levying a real estate property transfer tax. At the Aug. 13 Macon County Commission meeting, commissioners agreed to ask the voters if the county can collect up to four-tenths of a percent (0.4%) from each real estate transaction.

County to build animal shelter

Finally, commissioners are ready to address the county's long pending animal control problem. At the Aug. 13 Macon County Commission meeting, the board agreed to fund first the construction of an animal shelter for $350,000 and possibly operations from the county's fund balance at a later date.

Town extends ABC lease

The ABC (Alcohol Beverage Control) store can keep its home on the hill between the Highlands Playhouse and Town Hall for another three years. At the Aug. 15 Town Board meeting, commissioners agreed to extend the lease with the store at $1 a year with the understanding that in three years things may change on the site.

Fine Art Center to break ground

On Tuesday, Aug. 14, members of the Fine Art Center team – Bob Fisher, Pat Taylor, Tom Clark and Hank Ross – and the town's Josh Ward, met with Tim Murphy, project manager and Max Couch, construction supervisor of Trehel Corporation of Clemson, S.C., who will be building the art center.

Macon County in 'extreme' drought

The N.C. Division of Forest Resources has initiated a statewide ban on all open burning and canceled all burning permits effective Aug. 21, 2007. The ban on open burning will be in effect until further notice.

New diplomas to address graduation & drop-out rates

With a single unanimous motion, Macon County School Board may have figured out a way to increase its cohort graduation rate and decrease, if not eliminate, its drop-out rate. At the Aug. 27 school board meeting, board members approved two new diploma programs at Franklin High School – one for students at risk of dropping out or not graduating due to a lack of credits and one for students who are bored with the traditional high school course offerings and are ready for more.

School system stands poised for future

Most of Macon County Schools hit targets set by the state concerning Annual Yearly Progress (AYP) for the 2006-2007 school year. The ABCs of Public Education began in the 1996-1997 school year as part of North Carolina's school improvement program.

'Child's' play in local garden

Betty Ingrish on Whiteside Road was wondering why the daisies she planted around her waterfall and pond were showing signs of wear. Now she knows! The area has become a playground for a mama bear and her three cubs.

September

Highlands and Franklin tie

Highlander Greg Porter races Franklin opponent for the ball during the Thursday, Aug. 30 game played at Franklin. The teams tied, 2-2. Highlands plays Franklin at home tonight, Thursday, Sept. 6 at 5 p.m.

Citizens to vote on 'liquor by the drink'

Come November the citizens of Highlands will decide whether liquor by the drink can be sold at restaurants in town.

Judge rules in Riverwalk's favor

On Thursday, Sept. 13, Administrative Law Judge Beecher Gray granted Riverwalk's Motion for Summary Judgment, dismissing the two civil penalties of $200,000 each levied by the Town of Highlands in December of 2006. "In making his ruling, Judge Gray indicated the town failed to follow proper procedure in assessing the fines and that the fines were not supported by the evidence the Town Board had before it at the December 6, 2006 meeting," said Riverwalk Attorney Billy Clarke with Robert & Stevens law firm in Asheville.

Flood plain ordinance coming to Highlands

The state has finally released the county's long-awaited flood plain map which was revised due to the devastation caused by Hurricane Ivan. On Sept. 19, the Macon County Watershed Council met to finalize the Flood Damage Control Ordinance and that night, the Town Board learned it needed to adopt a similar ordinance.

PB says 'yes' to outdoor displays

Finally, after a succession of Town Board and Planning Board meetings, a decision was made concerning the display of outdoor merchandise. It's allowed. At the Sept. 24 Planning Board meeting, members agreed upon verbiage allowing outdoor merchandise displays similar to the one in Vail, CO.

The race is on for three Town Board seats

Six candidates have lined up for three seats on the Highlands Town Board. Two seats are now occupied by Commissioners Dennis DeWolf and Alan Marsh who are both running for their second term; the other will be vacated by Commissioner Herb James who leaves the post after four terms.

October

Hospital gets new general surgeon

General surgery will soon be available again at Highlands-Cashiers Hospital. The hospital announced this week that a board-certified Atlanta surgeon will open a practice here Nov. 5 in association with the hospital. F. Augustus "Gus" Dozier, MD, FACS, who already has a North Carolina medical license, was credentialed by a unanimous vote of the hospital's medical staff last week. Hospital board members gave their final stamp of approval to the deal at their regular meeting on Thursday.

The 6th graders at MMS were not able to attend the presentation due to limited space in the MMS gymnasium. However, one of the presentations was recorded for future educational use in the schools. The recording will be made available to students at Nantahala and Highlands schools, as well as the 6th graders at MMS and any 5th graders whose principals want them to view the video.

Von Behrens discussed his use of tobacco and the consequences it brought him, as well as several life lessons for the students. He emphasized that "you can't judge a book by its cover," and he also talked about loving and respecting your parents. Von Behrens mentioned that when he was in and out of hospitals, it was his mother and not his friends who was always by his side.

Von Behrens

Jennifer Hollifield, with the Macon County Health Department, said after Von Behrens' presentation there were many cans of spit tobacco found in the trash at FHS. "We all feel that if one student stops using tobacco due to these presentations then it was worth everything to get Gruen to Macon County," she said.

On the Friday following Von Behrens' visit, public health dentists Dr. David Oliver and Dr. Camelia Chang provided oral cancer screenings at FHS and MMS to students who had parental permission. Six students were seen at MMS and no problems were identified, while 17 FHS students were evaluated, and 7 of these were referred to their own dentists about potential problems.

Von Behrens' presentation was organized by Jennifer Hollifield and Diane Alexander at the Macon County Department of Public Health. They wanted to recognize Dr. David Oliver, Dr. Camelia Chang, Lead School Nurse Jennifer Garrett, School Nurse Debbie Hamilton, School Nurse Rita Esterwood, and FHS principal Gary Shields and MMS principal Todd Gibbs.

there is no genuine issue of material fact," wrote Judge Elmore in his brief.

"The statute in question, states that a city shall provide a means of proportional representation based on population for residents of the extraterritorial area to be regulated. The statute doesn't define what means should be used. However, our Supreme Court has stated, 'It is often said that matters of local concern are and should be left largely to the judgment and discretion of a town government and that the courts will not interfere with their acts unless they are manifestly unreasonable and oppressive.'"

Judge Elmore said the county didn't demonstrate that the town's method was unreasonable, nor has it demonstrated that a city cannot provide its own means of proportional representation.

"The statute plainly states that a city shall provide its own means of proportional representation and we, like the trial court decline to read the statute otherwise. Accordingly, we affirm the order and the judgment of the trial court," he wrote.

"We felt quite confident in the fair way proportional representation was developed and stood firm in defense of our methods," said Mayor Don Mullen.

At an April 2007 Town Board meeting, members voted 3 to 1 to amend the code to mirror the brief filed by the town. Commissioners Herb James, Amy Patterson and Dennis DeWolf voted yes; Commissioner Alan Marsh voted no, and Commissioner Hank Ross was out of town.

"The only change to what has actually taken place concerning representation is that the exact method of determining proportional representation is spelled out in detail in our code, now — same as in the brief the Town filed," said Town Administrator Richard Betz. "And it clearly says ETJ members can participate in all Planning Board and Zoning Board matters — which they have been doing anyway."

The county had hoped to put more ETJ representatives on at least the Planning Board and possibly the Zoning board. Currently there are seven members on the Planning Board — two of which are from the ETJ. There are five members on the Zoning Board — one of which is from the ETJ.

Town Attorney Bill Coward said the county has a limited right to appeal to the Superior Court of Macon County — to petition the court to review the latest ruling. "There is no guarantee the Superior Court will hear the case," he said. "It's probably a waste of time and money to pursue it at this point."

County representatives have not said if they will pursue the case any further.

the Boiler Room in Franklin last Thursday night, discourse which was easy during the small-talk phase, became increasingly strained as the evening progressed with Commissioner Herb James walking out of the meeting.

Greenway Trail ordinances proposed

Most of Monday night's Planning Board meeting was devoted to the Greenway Trail and how it would affect homeowners and commercial entities. To make the Greenway Trail viable, the path it takes must be backed up by the town's zoning ordinance particularly as it pertains to trail width, buffers, lot size exceptions and setback exceptions.

BOE takes steps to fix 'mistake'

Monday's meeting of the Macon County Board of Education included information about the bond referendum that is on the ballot for the Nov. 6 elections, as well as clarification regarding the board's advertisements for the bond. There were also updated plans on display of the proposed 5-6 grade middle school, the K-4 North Macon School and the renovations to the existing East Franklin School.

Town asks county for help

Though the Town Board thinks it's likely Highlands will pay to build a transfer station at the landfill, they're not beyond asking for financial help from the county. At the Oct. 17 Town Board meeting, commissioners voted 4 to 1 to ask the county to forego tipping fees for about four years to help offset the cost of building a municipal solid waste (MSW) transfer station. Town Administrator Richard Betz sent the county the letter shortly thereafter.

November

Senator Snow requests funds for town

At a special Town Board meeting, Monday, Oct. 29, the Town Administrator Richard Betz distributed copies of a resolution drafted by Senator John Snow requesting the release of discretionary funds for the paving of Hickory Hill Road, Chowan Drive, and Cullasaja Drive.

Humvee and Ruby are newest additions to police dept.

Slowly, the Highlands Police Department is acquiring tools common place in big-city police departments — an all-terrain vehicle and a drug dog.

Election results mean big changes

Only 29% of Macon County's 23,980 voters cast their ballots Tuesday but that was enough to stop the county's bond issuance in its tracks, change the face of the Highlands Town Board and make the sale of mixed drinks and malt beverages allowable in Highlands. At the December Town Board meeting, incumbent Dennis DeWolf and new commissioners John "Buz" Dotson and Larry Rogers will be sworn into office.

Wheeler house burns in Saturday fire

About 4 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 10, life changed for Dr. Patti Wheeler and her family but thanks to the community that is Highlands, change won't be as bad as it could be. A couple of neighbors in the vicinity of Satulah Ridge Road had just returned home from a hike up Whiteside Mountain when they saw smoke billowing out of the eaves of the Wheeler house.

Highlands receives top Traffic Safety Honor

AAA Carolinas' Foundation for Traffic Safety awarded Highlands the top honor as North Carolina's most Outstanding Traffic Safety Community. The Foundation has given this award in the past four years in an endeavor to recognize cities that make a strong effort to make their state's highways safer.

Horton new county manager

It only took three months for the county to find its next county manager and as it turns out, he's been here before. Commissioners found what they believe the county needs in C. Jack Horton, 57, current county manager of Caldwell County in Lenoir, N.C.; population 78,000. He begins January, 7, 2008 at a salary of $125,000.

Cooley new town planner

After almost a year, Highlands now has a Planning and Development Director. The job title has changed, but for the most part the duties of Joseph Cooley will mimic those of the previous Zoning Administrator/Planning Director. Cooley is currently a lawyer with the Smith, Gambrell & Russell Land Use Group in Atlanta, GA.

Cyprus now offers mixed drinks & beer

Another restaurant has joined the ranks of Peregrin's, Madison Restaurant and the Rib Shack. Come this weekend alcoholic beverages and beer will be available at Cyprus International Restaurant, too.

'Sex-ed' class starting Spring '08

Teen pregnancies continue to be a problem in Macon County so school administrators are ready to try a pro-active approach to the subject of sex education. At the Nov. 19 Macon County School Board meeting held in Nantahala, the board voted to recruit a Healthy Living teacher to begin January 2008.

December

Hospital hires 2nd surgeon

Dr. Billy Noell joins the staff.

Room tax committee begins groundwork

An organizational meeting of the newly formed Occupancy Tax Study Committee met Wednesday to discuss possible changes in the way occupancy tax money is distributed in the county. Macon County Commissioners Bob Simpson and Brian McClellan co-chaired the committee. Also present were Bob Kietlyka, of Highlands Chamber of Commerce; Linda Harbuck, of Franklin Chamber of Commerce; Ron Baker, Nantahala lodging representative; Josh Drake, Franklin lodging representative; Hank Ross, Town of Highlands commissioner; and Mike Grubermann, Town of Franklin commissioner. Rick Siegel, the Highlands lodging representative was absent.

King and queen for the night!

Restaurant parking solution offered

The Town Board may be nearing a solution to the restaurant parking problem the town has been plagued with lately. At Wednesday's Town Board meeting, owner of Wild Thyme Gourmet, Nancy Brun suggested the town consider allowing dual-use parking to satisfy the town's seat versus parking space requirement for restaurants outside the B1 zoning district.

Zachary Park continues to grow

At Monday night's Macon County Commission meeting, the board firmed up its agreement to purchase about two acres next to Zachary Park. A 1.986-acre parcel owned by Lucille Zachary Potts, which is next to the 1.761-acre parcel for which the county paid $50,000 in earnest money in October, abuts Zachary Park property.

Stray problem soon finalized

Pending an ordinance, the county is ready to form an Animal Care and Control Unit. At the Dec. 10 Macon County Commission meeting, the board heard from Sheriff Robbie Holland who sits on the county's Animal Control Study Committee chaired by Dr. Amy Patterson.

Case of missing Rec Park money closed

Almost a year later, District Attorney Michael Bonfoey issued a statement concerning the N.C. State Bureau of Investigation (SBI) findings in the matter. In a letter to Mayor Mullen dated June. 6, 2007, Bonfoey said during a four-month investigation of the Highlands Recreation Department which was requested by Highlands Police Chief Bill Harrell on August 17, 2006, the SBI interviewed more than 24 people concerning "lost money" at the recreation department and requested an audit from the town.

Soccer field proposed at Highlands School

Members of the county recreation soccer league have devised a way to construct an extra soccer field in Highlands.

... LETTERS continued from page 2

On the question of meaning, the authors and I agree on the belief that purpose is intrinsic to meaning. In other words, there has to be a purpose behind the universe for life to have meaning. That is where our similarities end. In this theoretical model we are told that our experiences are leading to god's re-awakening. However, if having knowledge presupposes experience, and this deity must have all knowledge, then are we not trapped in a learning exercise without end?

When it comes to morality, Ms. Brugger tells us that good and bad are just parts of god. Therefore, good and evil are equally valid. According to this theory, one has no basis to condemn Hitler or Stalin because they were just "playing their parts." In a recent article Ms. Brugger used the example of the sequels of Texas Chainsaw Massacre as evidence that god wanted to experience being a serial killer. By that logic, god also yearns to be a pedophile due to the plight of child-pornography. While Ms. Brugger wrote in the same article that she didn't support such behavior, genuine condemnation is not a possibility in her world view. She ended that article by assuring us that there was no need to worry because everything was "perfect exactly the way it is." Somehow I don't think that would bring much comfort to the woman that has been brutally raped or the oppressed people in Darfur.

Finally, when it comes to the question of destiny, we are told that their world view doesn't offer any definitive answer. While I commend their honesty in this admission of shortcoming, questions must still be asked. If there is no ultimate judgment, which the authors reject, what of justice not carried out in this lifetime? If there is no system of deterrence, such as retributive reincarnation or purgatory, why choose a life of self-sacrifice over a life of debauchery or hedonism? There can be no distinction between the philanderer and the philanthropist.

In closing, I would like to make it clear that I am not picking on Mr. Hancock and Ms. Brugger and mean no disrespect. I just felt it was worth mentioning that monumental issues such as those mentioned above are no laughing matter and certainly no game.

Auditions for HCP's 'Last Ballyhoo...' Jan. 6 & 7 at PAC

The Last Night of Ballyhoo is set in Atlanta in December 1939 during the time "Gone With the Wind" is premiering at the Fox Theater and Hitler is invading Poland. But Atlanta's elitist German Jews are much more concerned with who is going to Ballyhoo, the social event of the season. The New York Post wrote: "Alfred Uhry's charming Broadway comedy (sort of) The Last Night of Ballyhoo, ...is funny... and like Driving Miss Daisy before it - it has a subtext and undertow of thought. It is a delightful comedy freighted with an uncomfortable message."

Directed by Mary Adair Leslie. Copies of the script are available for reading at the libraries in Highlands and Cashiers. Cast includes: One mature man, two mature women, two younger men and two younger women. If you have questions please call Mary Adair at 828.526.2673 or 706.782.9579 or email at summitonegallery@verizon.net

Summit One Gallery artist to be featured on 20/20

The national television newsmagazine 20/20 came to Asheville in November to film artist Jonas Gerard for a feature, "Living with Happiness." Gerard is happy, his life is happy. He has abounding energy. And that energy is infused into his canvases. His forceful, spontaneous manner and central core of energy are a lifeline for the artist. The splashes of color, whether painted or thrown on, create a spirited canvas and composition not easily forgotten. Since the 70s, it is this spirit, energy and consistency that brought him to the forefront of the national art scene.

Gerard believes in the art of true Expressionism. In the past he has explored other styles, including representational, figurative and portraiture, but his abstract work has held true over time. In all his exhibitions whether in Chicago, Atlanta, D.C. or Miami, one can feel the strength these paintings evoke.

Bringing to life the tradition of abstract expressionism, Jonas Gerard emerged fifty years ago into the art scene with work which has currently evolved into a mesmerizing explosion of color, contrast and movement. And like the great contemporary Masters, such as Willem DeKooning, Jackson Pollock, Hans Hoffman and Franz Kline, Gerard has found his very own style of abstraction which is continuously growing and developing.

Gerard comments, "As an artist, it's important for me to give the viewer the opportunity to become one with sensitivity. This art will reveal a truth that conveys an existence that is unique within our very soul. In my painting and mixed media techniques I open the door to time and space, allowing me to abstract from the primitive and contemporary states, as well as from moments of my personal life. I believe that through abstract art we can channel ourselves consciously and subconsciously to experience the sustaining power of the universe."

"Each of my compositions is an expression of an inner journey where I aim to step out of my own way and balance, within the moment, all the intuitive inspirations coming at me. There is a constant and ongoing evolution in my relationship with the canvas. The absolute joy of self discovery blessed to live on this land and be a part of Highlands. She feels a strong responsibility and desire to protect the forests, native plants, creeks, rivers, and lakes and the many kinds of animals and wildlife. For those reasons she was unanimously elected to serve a three year term on the Board of Directors of HCLT.

and self expression is an integral part of who I am as an artist. This process demands a kind of fearless honesty. The resulting painting is loaded like a charged battery that never fails, continuously holding the viewer's attention for a lifetime."

If you watch him paint, you can actually see the 'trusting' in his intuition. While mesmerizing music plays in the background, he becomes completely absorbed in expressing what is in his heart with a gestural painting style that appears almost as a spontaneously choreographed dance. The strong rhythms and sounds of his music are, for him, instrumental in creating the daring space to transcend limitations and fears that may come up. To the viewer, it may seem that the painting is done by the music itself while the artist is simply holding the brush.

"As an artist, it's important for me to give the viewer the opportunity to come in contact with the essence of what these paintings are about," says Gerard.

More than 50 years of passion and dedication to his work has brought him to the level he has achieved. His work has been exhibited and collected all over the United States and abroad, in private as well as in public collections. "We the People," a bi-centennial portrait of the United States, presented to President Ford in the White House in 1975, is in the permanent collection of the Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D.C.

board and appreciates her strong land ethic which has been passed down from generation to generation in her family. She has been a member of the Land Stewards of the Highlands Plateau for several years. Graduating from the University of Tennessee, she has had experience in teaching, owning her own business, and volunteering in the community.

The 20/20 feature is scheduled to be aired on Friday, January 11, 2008. Check the local listings for the time. Jonas Gerard's work may be seen at Summit One Gallery, located in "The Galleries" on South Second Street, Highlands NC. 828.526.2673

Christmas at the Living Center

Between 70 and 80 family members joined residents and other guests at the annual Christmas party at Eckerd Living Center Thursday evening. Santa and a half dozen "elves for the evening" passed out presents and spread large helpings of holiday cheer. Each year hospital employees, volunteers and others adopt an Eckerd Center resident and buy gifts (selecting names from the ornaments that hang on a large Christmas tree put up each year in the hospital's cafeteria). Extended nursing patients in the hospital were also included in the celebration. The hospital's nutrition services department provided plenty of hors d'oeuvres and sweet treats for the residents, guests, and staff. In all, some 200 people celebrated the holiday together.

RBC Centura sponsors 'Tribute to teachers'

One of the many things that are GIANT to RBC Centura is a commitment to leadership and overall excellence. That's why it is honoring leaders in the community that do GIANT things every day: Teachers — those outstanding individuals dedicated to enriching students and supplying them with the tools to help build a better future for all of us.

Anyone can nominate a deserving teacher from the Highlands community by clicking on the big pencil on the home page of the RBC Centura website. Several years ago Highlands School Great Beginnings teacher Jane Chalker won $500 classroom cash for her class. "I would love to see a deserving Highlands teacher win again," said Sue Gorski, manager of the Highlands RBC Centura bank.

Nominate an elementary or middle school teacher in your community by telling why your teacher (or your children's) teacher is a leader in the classroom and in the community. RBC Centura wants to reward these teachers for their outstanding leadership. RBC Centura teams in the Southeast region will determine a total of 35 winners based on these nominations for community contribution with demonstrated commitment to educational excellence and enrichment.

The nomination period is Dec. 1, 2007 through March 16, 2008 and each winner will be awarded $500 "Classroom Cash" to be used on learning tools for their classrooms. One grand prize winner will receive a $2,000 shopping spree at Stone's Education Superstore in Raleigh, NC (travel included).

At the conclusion of the program, RBC Centura's website will salute and congratulate the winning teachers.

Click www.rbccentura.com for more information and to make a nomination to the "Tribute To Teachers" program.

PseudoCube®

#AN1E - Level of Difficulty - Hard

THE SETUP:

The cube has 27 consecutive numbers in it, arranged in three layers with 9 numbers each. These numbers are arranged in a special pattern: For each layer, the sum of the three numbers in each row, column or diagonal, is 3 times its center number. Eight diagonals connect all 3 layers by running through the center number of the middle layer. Each diagonal contains 3 numbers equaling the total of the three center numbers. One of the diagonals is shown with circles.

THE CHALLENGE:

Start with the three center numbers for each layer and the other numbers given. Now pour a cup of coffee, pick up a pencil and eraser and try to figure out where the other numbers belong. Good Luck!

The first correct solution emailed earns a coupon for a FREE cup of coffee from Buck's Coffee Cafe on Main Street.

N-Cryptoku®

Object: Assign 9 different letters to each cell of 9 columns and 9 rows. In addition, nine 3 x 3 cells in the layout have the same nine different letters (this is similar to Sudoku but uses nine letters instead of nine numbers). A 'mystery word or phrase' using all nine different letters is designated by circled squares (other short words appear when solving, for which a list of meanings is provided). Every puzzle has a different 'mystery word or phrase' (no spaces).

How to Solve: Determine the nine different letters among those given. Try to solve the mystery word using the clue given and write it in. Other small words will appear in the puzzle. As in conventional crossword puzzles, a list of meanings for these ACROSS/ DOWN words is given and number positions shown. Doing them will speed up your solution to the puzzle. Using your powers of induction, inference and insight, place missing letters in all blank squares according to the rules noted above. Focus attention where the least number of letters are needed to complete a line, column or 3 x 3 cell.
