TB meeting postponed due to weather

Snow predicted for Wednesday night began to fall steadily around 5 p.m. and by six commissioners agreed to postpone the Wednesday, Jan. 5 Town Board meeting to Wednesday, Jan. 12.

It's likely the same agenda will apply and some issues will be perfunctory.

Once again the Highlands Police Department will be recognized by Triple A as a Top Traffic Safe Community.

It's likely the board will accept James Manley chief for 2011 and Olan Vinson as one of the town's trustees on the Firemen's Relief Fund's - as requested by members-at-large.

Commissioners will select one of two bidders for the Greenway trail construction job on Big Bear Pen Mountain.

The board will likely sign a mutual aid agreement with Duke Energy to help with emergency

'Affordable Housing' comes up again

After more than two and half years, the subject of affordable housing in Highlands is back on the burner - scheduled for the Jan. 5 Town Board meeting at the request of Highlands Housing, Inc., but with the meeting postponed due to inclement weather until Wednesday, July 12 at 7 p.m., it will be discussed then.

The last time a word was uttered was early August of 2008 - when the Town Board shot down the proposed Shortoff Woods facility on Buck Creek Road and again by the Workforce Housing

Task Force at its culmination meeting at the end of the month.

"We need to keep our eye on the purse and not let the personal issues that came into play affect the ultimate goal," said taskforce member Christy Kelly. "We do need

Town works on drug policy

At the November 17 Town Board meeting, commissioners discussed working on a drug policy for town employees and Highlands Fire and Rescue volunteers because they are covered under the town's insurance policy.

Town Attorney Bill Coward directed commissioners to a website entitled "Elaws - Drug-free Workplace Advisor" where a custom-made policy can be generated based on answers to a questionnaire.

Commissioners were asked to go through the policy-generator prior to a worksession on Wednesday, Jan. 5, where the board ultimately clarified the breadth of drug policy as it applies to Highlands. Commissioners discussed exactly what they wanted included and instructed Coward to draw up the policy and present it at the first Town Board meeting in February.

The amended policy will apply to all applicants as part of the application procedure which will include mandatory passage of a drug test administered as a condition of employment. All employees will also be required to sign the drug policy document but won't be tested for drugs unless there is suspicion.

A 'locals' take on bear hunting and other issues

Dear Editor,

I would like to thank Miss Etta Neely for stepping up to the bear hunting controversy in her letter-to-the-editor in the Dec. 23 issue. I've been reading all the hooplah and patiently waiting to see if any of our local bear hunters were going to speak up. Taking into consideration that most of the local people left in the area are the working-class, juggling jobs and family and keeping appointments, we don't have time for this crap. But thanks goes out to Miss Etta who found the time to speak up for us and now it's time for me to put my two bits in.

I've watched for many years, people coming into our area, putting their straw hats on and their overalls and boots, and all of a sudden they know everything about everything in these mountains. We call them "Wannabes"

First disagreement I had was their ideas that the rattlesnakes were extinct and we need to protect them. Being a chicken farmer and coming home and finding the slithering baby chicken thieves in the coop with the baby chicks in their mouths choking them down is something these people needed to see. I say to them "Get off the beaten path folks!" They hike a few trails and decide they're extinct. Get you a few chickens and really get down into these mountains, then come talk to me. What really got my goat was teaching the children that they would rattle before striking. What a joke! I had one jump up out of the grass and strike my horse on the leg and didn't rattle until it had already bitten. Once had a baby rattler less than a foot-long strike from underneath the bush, more full of venom than a grown snake. No rattle until after striking and then it sounded like a bumble bee. What are you teaching your children? We teach ours to keep their eyes open! Like the locals, the rattlers hear so much noise and hooplah they just don't bother to rattle anymore.

And what's next ...don't kill the bats. Even though they carry rabies if they come in your house, don't dare hurt them. Protect them. But let's bring in the Peregrine falcons that can pick off a bat in mid-air. Hope you are enjoying watching them pick off the little defenseless Hummingbirds right off your feeders, too. Keep protecting and multiplying them hawks, though. After the rattlers and having bears tear my coops apart to have a free chicken meal I thought the chickens had a better chance free ranging. Not a chance since we're now protecting the hawks. So much for the farmers, eh?

Now it's the bear hunters! I think ALL of our bear hunters are being judged based on what and how a few may or may not be doing. Adding to Miss Etta's statement "Get your priorities straight" it might help if you got your facts straight, as well.

Did you know? That most of the hunters today are not from around here but from out-of-town and even out-of-state? Not knowing the area they wouldn't know that your home may just be on the other side of that laurel thicket.

Did you know? That our "Local" hunters who know the area are rarely hunting anymore due to all the out-of-area hunters that are now hunting their turf?

Did you know? That when they do get to hunt and their dogs tree a bear that before they can get to their dogs someone else has gotten there and already shot the bear?

Did you know? That if our "LOCAL" hunters tree a bear and it's a female or a young bear or has cubs they won't shoot it. Instead they pull their dogs off and go home — dogs having had a good run and training session. Those females carry on their tradition.

Do you know? How much these "Out Of Area Hunters" are being paid by other "Out of Area" people just to go on a hunt to shoot a bear, put that notch in their belt and head on their walls. A few years back I saw a truck with a Tennessee tag going through Highlands Plaza parking lot with a tiny bear that couldn't weigh over 75 lbs. tied on top of his truck. Not in the bed of the truck but on top of the cab. True Wannabe, eh? I would've been ashamed to call myself a hunter. Our locals wouldn't even bother with one that size. As usual, our locals and their traditions are being shoved off the mountain to make room for the "Wannabes."

So go ahead, make Highlands your little sanctuary with your rattlers, your hawks, your coyotes and your bears. Feed them up real good in your driveways. When the bears start picking off your little dogs and the coyotes keep picking off your kitty cats, as they do, and when Mama bear charges out of the laurels and rips you apart for being too close to her cub when you didn't even know she was there, don't bother to call the locals and ask "What should I do?"

How many lost dogs and cat posters do you see through the summer months? Notice how they diminish when the bear season opens and the bears and coyotes are scattered. Get a clue folks!

And do us a favor — if you are going to keep playing God with nature then keep your little sanctuary in the Highlands city limits and don't dare try to expand the limits any further. If I sound "politically incorrect" then OK. I had Joe Biden as an example when he and the media taught our youngsters that we don't have to be "politically correct" anymore with "This is a big___ing deal."

As for the meeting of WNC Wildlife Advocates to help educate "the hunters" and encourage responsible behavior, just who is educating the educators and the Wannabes?

And, YES, I do eat bear meat and YES, if Sarah Palin runs for President and can find a Vice like Etta Neely she will definitely have my vote in 2012. It's time to step up instead of lying down and rolling over.

About a new Highlands Post Office

Dear Editor,

This is a letter to the USPS Planning Team.

My wife and I support enthusiastically your decision to accept Jane Woodruff's offer to build Highlands a new post office. We have never understood why the Cashiers post office is so much nicer than the one in Highlands. Sorry we missed notice of the public hearing or we would have been there to lend our support.

We have read and heard complaints about the difficult parking on the Highway 28 side of the building and they all have merit, but we have seen no public reports about the problem that snow and ice present when accessing the building in winter.

Today, I almost fell attempting to pass through the barrier of snow and ice between the parking spaces and the building's sidewalk. It is piled up to a height of 18 to 20 inches! I do not care what your age may be, it is very dangerous, and for the person of average age in Highlands it is a major hazard.

Please therefore in your planning for the new facility address this problem intelligently. There are a number of alternatives you might consider, but it seems to me the best for our Highlands weather may be heated sidewalks and parking spaces. I am sure that your architects know the best solution to this problem. Pushing the snow out of parking areas only to have it create Hattie Sue Ledford Reese "our loving Mama Sue", age 74, died Sunday December 26, 2010 at Memorial Mission Hospital. Sue was a native of Macon County and the daughter of the late Howard and Orpha Hastings Ledford.

Consideration needed for year-rounders!

Dear Editor,

We are year-round residents of Highlands. I moved here in 1971 – yes, 40 years ago. We live on Upper Clear Creek Road as "The Forgotten People."

The secondary roads are taken care of exactly as they were 40 years ago, i.e., not at all! Cell phone useage is laughable and non-existent in too much of Highlands.

We were snowed in for four days with the last winter blast. My husband drove me to work going the back way – Blue Valley. It was very icy and precarious at best.

If we were to screech for help, who would/could have helped? There is no cell phone reception! Even the main highway, NC 28, was a dangerous icy mess.

Do we not pay taxes, work and stay active giving of ourselves to a community we love

• LAUGHING AT LIFE •

Dang-nab-bit, I missed the bear But I nailed Grandma right between the eyes.

I never did get into the hunting and killing animals thing but I'm not opposed to those that do. For me, hunting humans was much more challenging and sometimes they shot back.
Now that's a thrill few have experienced and it's not a good one.

Write this down! If you bought a handgun to ward off attackers, get rid of it ... immediately. Don't shoot
'cause you'll miss and upset your attacker. You stand a better chance if you throw the gun at him and run.

Lately, there's much ado about shooting bears in and around the Highlands area and, as usual there are strong feelings on both sides of the issue.
I'm not sure how the bears feel but I'm guessin' they're not happy about gettin' thinned out. Sitting safely in Palm Beach where bear hunters are nonexistent, I could say, "Ha, ha, ha, you can't shoot me from here!" I won't because it'll get hunters' shorts in a wad. From what I've read so far, they're pretty sensitive when it comes to killin' stuff.

The really bad part about allowing a bunch of testosterone laden guys wearing John Deere caps permission to kill bears is, if they miss, where does the slug go? No one knows but hopefully not in Grandma's head. Why bears need to be thinned out is my question? By the way, if you're a hunter who eats his bear kill, my hat is off to you.
Wow, you must have a steel lined stomach and be one mean dude.

And here's my warning to the everyday folks who live in the area or just came to visit for a while. Be very afraid of the hunter.
While skilled hunters seldom miss their target, there are also a bunch of clowns out there who haven't picked up a rifle since last hunting season, if then. And here's another warning: It's not a good time to be wearing your fur coat, especially when you're passing garbage dumpsters.

Everyone, especially hunters, should watch the video of ex-convict Clay Duke open fire on the Panama City school board at point blank range. (See it on You-Tube – warning; it's graphic.) Clay came to kill school board members but wound up shooting himself in the head. Before Clay killed himself, he was wounded by a retired policeman who entered the room and put one round in him, dropping him to the floor. Just in case you're not the sharpest tool in the shed ... or maybe from Sanford

Fred Wooldridge

(ha), the message here is:
one trained cop, one bullet, one hit. Also, the message is: one angry untrained clown, 10 shots and no hits.

The video is a perfect example of how inaccurate an unskilled shooter is when firing a weapon at point blank range and why an untrained citizen shouldn't have one. Watch the video, then take the gun from under your bed and,
unless you fire the weapon often with accuracy, unload it and get rid of it. You're going to miss your attacker and hit one of the kids ... or Grandma.

One of the greatest things I learned from attending the best SWAT school in the country was learning how inaccurate a small handgun is in the hands of an inexperienced person. That factor helped keep me alive my whole career.

Moving on, please don't tell Sarah Palin, but I don't eat bear, deer, caribou, elk, moose, buffalo, squirrel, opossum or rabbit. Sarah's an expert on identifying wild poop. She knows grizzly poop from caribou poop. Being a poop expert will come in handy if she becomes our president since Congress is full of ... well, you know.

Anyway, while killing bears might be the "in" fun thing this year, my question is what yahoo decided we had too many bears? And how many is too many? How many human deaths from bears did Highlands encounter this year? How many bear attacks have we had? Are our bears starving?

We could neuter bear cubs at birth like we do with our house pets but would momma bear's shorts be in a wad? Well, I guess we could shoot her first and hope the cubs survive ... nah; the dogs would tear them to shreds. Besides, there's nothing like havin' a cute li'l stuffed cub on your mantle.

Finally, here's my bottom line. Unless our bears start attacking and killing humans or we find them dead in the woods from starvation, leave them the hell alone. They are one of God's beautiful creatures.

PS – Chew on this! Is war God's way of thinning out the human herd?

Any day can be 'resolution' day

I don't make New Year resolutions. Turning over new leaves is a good idea any time of year. There is always a rush on January 1. People identify their shortcomings and decide to rectify them. Nearly everyone who smokes would like to quit. Fat people want to be thin. Slugs want to get more exercise. Debtors long to escape the burden. The problem is that there is no compelling reason to choose the first of the year to turn a lot of leaves. Goals are desirable any time of year.

What is usually missing is the "teachable moment." Unfortunately, that moment may come too late. Coughing blood may be a powerful incentive for a smoker, but unfortunately it probably arrives too late to be of much value. Better to realize that time is short when walking to the mail box becomes a breathless chore, or when nicotine addiction has an unrelenting grip. When the doctor's office calls and says his patient needs a CT scan to follow up a suspicious chest x-ray, cigarettes lose much of their appeal, but the moment may have come too late. The cough that never clears, increasing shortness of breath, the need for a nightly nicotine fix are all clear warnings, and should alert a smoker that worse is on the way. If the New Year seems the moment to cast off the habit, that's fine; Happy New Year and Good Luck.

My gym wasn't crowded on New Year Day. It's anybody's guess if church services or hangovers were the reason. There were a few eager exercisers on January 2, but no waiting lines for the treadmill. Exercise is great as an aid to weight loss, to enhance cardiovascular fitness, maintain muscle tone and bone strength. It doesn't matter if a person starts on January 1st. The point is to start. I hope that at least one reader will start on January 6, 2011, immediately after reading my column. I would love to be your teachable moment.

It's a good idea to have a partner, someone to share the pain. It's even better to find a partner to share the joy. It's easy to call your training partner and offer an excuse. It's easier to make the call the second day. Pretty soon, you just stop calling. On the other hand, you may choose a dog as your aerobic partner. He won't take no for answer. He'll bark, or howl, or whine, depending on his breed and personality. He'll canter joyfully to the door and back to your bed, reminding you that it's time to get moving. He'll never be too tired for his walk, never offer excuses, nor have conflicting obligations. A dog is the ideal companion. He won't help your weight training, but it is easy to move to the weights after a brisk and lengthy walk. As time passes and fitness increases, you may decide to start jogging. You'll get no complaints from Fido.

There are lots of worthy resolutions and 365 days a year to initiate them. Decide to wear a seatbelt every time you get in a car. Eat a healthier diet. Drink less. Play more. Decide to spend more time with your family, be more pleasant at work.

cion of use or to determine if a vehicle accident resulting in second-party property damage was due to drugs or alcohol.

"The test can protect us and the employee," said Commissioner Amy Patterson. "We may have someone accuse an employee of being under the influence at the site of an accident and if we have the test we can say 'no he wasn't'."

Using the policy builder, the board worked through 13 sections – each dealing with one main question and subsequent sub-questions so that in the end the policy generated will deal expressly with Highlands' needs.

The questions were: What is the purpose/goal of your policy?; Who will be covered by your policy?; When will your policy apply?; What behavior will be prohibited?; Will employees be required to notify you of drug-related convictions?; will your policy include searches?; Will your program include drug testing?; What will the consequences be if your policy is violated?; Will there be Return-to-Work agreements?; What type of assistance will be available?; How will employee confidentiality be protected?; Who will be responsible for enforcing your policy?; and How will your policy be communicated to employees?

According to the site, the purpose of a drug-free workplace policy is to send a clear message that the use of alcohol and drugs in the workplace is prohibited and it should encourage employees to voluntarily seek help with alcohol and drug problems.

"Our bottomline principle should be that the people who are spending taxpayers' money should get productivity out of employees and there should be a safe working environment," said Commissioner Patterson. "We should apply that statement to every question."

Concerning who will be covered by the policy the following statement is automatically included: any individual who conducts business for the Town of Highlands, is applying for a position or is conducting business on the Town of Highlands property is covered by Highlands' drug-free workplace policy. Specific positions selected were full- or part-time employees, volunteers, interns, and applicants. Contractors will be required to verify that all their employees and any subcontractors used also comply with drug-free workplace stipulations.

Standard is the following statement which is included in most organizations' policy so it will automatically appear in a policy generated by the program: It is a violation of the Town of Highlands drug-free workplace policy to use, possess, sell, trade, and/or offer for sale alcohol, illegal drugs or intoxicants. In addition, some organizations are addressing the rampant abuse of prescription and over-the-counter medications in their policies.

Through the Drug-Free Workplace Act of 1988 requires any employee convicted of a drug-related offense in the workplace notify the organization in writing within five calendar days of the conviction. Some employers not subject to the act can choose to incorporate the requirement. However, the town will require disclosure.

The 1988 Act doesn't require employers to perform searches due to legislation limiting and prohibiting them, but Attorney Coward and Police Chief Bill Harrell said searches of town property – vehicles, lockers, desks, etc., – are allowed, but not personal items in desks, lockers, etc., like lunch boxes, pocket books, or other personal affects. Commissioners agreed that searches would only be conducted if there is suspicion of drug or alcohol use.

Likewise the 1988 Act doesn't require employers to demand drug testing but it can be required under other Federal regulations applying to safety-sensitive and security positions. But private employers do have the right to test for a wide variety of substances. As part of the application procedure and if an employee is suspected of using, the town will test urine for amphetamines, cannabinoids, cocaine, opiates and phencyclidine and will follow the Substance Abuse and mental Health Services Administration's standard procedures.

North Carolina has a "Controlled Substance Examination Regulation" codified at Gen. Stat. 95-230 et seq. The law purports to protect individuals from "unreliable and inadequate examinations and screening for controlled substances" and to preserve an individual's dignity to the extent practical, and focuses on chain-of-custody and laboratory testing procedures more than policy guidelines.

Commissioners were adamant about giving employees who test positive a chance to seek help through the town's insurance – though at the employee's expense – and to give employee's a second chance as long as they pass a Return-to-Duty test and sign a Return-Work-Agreement. However, they are reserving the right to terminate an employee immediately and to terminate if the employee tests positive for drug or alcohol use a second time.

Applicants who test positive for drug use won't be hired but will be allowed to reapply in a year's time.

Once the Drug-Free Policy is amended, all employees will receive a copy and the policy will be explained verbally during orientation and at safety and other department meetings. All supervisors will be trained to help recognize and manage employees with alcohol and other drug problems.

year-round? We love our church, wonderful friends and our involvement in Highlands. This is a nightmare!

We would love to see Highlands be a year-round destination for visitors – as well as ourselves. Is it too much to ask for well-maintained roads in 2011?

I find this far more important than banners and fluff and new trees! I remember when we had trees on Main Street.

Make our beautiful town a safe one for ALL concerned.

Post Office update

Dear Editor,

Our planned Post Office is advancing with the United States Postal Service for a long awaited decision toward the benefit of the Highlands community citizens and visiting patrons.

USPS required a seven-day notice prior to the public hearing on December 22. Notice was published by the local Postmaster in the current Post Office on December 15.

After receiving nearly 300 positive letters during July and August, I believe that our anticipated wishes for a new improved Post Office are about to come true. Many thanks again for all of your letters and verbal encouragement helping me to continue pursuing this improvement for Highlands.

I look forward to the official notification from USPS very soon.

The not so blue Christmas

"Is this the meat department?" The man on the telephone drawled. "The meat department?" I asked. "I guess I got the wrong number, huh?" The man sounded embarrassed. "No harm done," I said cheerily. "Happy New Year!" I put down the phone. It's come to this, I thought. I'm being mistaken for the meat department.

I approached the holidays with a mixture of dread and anticipation, not looking forward to my first Christmas and New Years without John. On the positive side, I was eager to hang out with Maman in Waynesboro, my old home town. It was tough to leave the cats for a week. Since Papa Cat wasn't around anymore, Orion and Weasel had become particularly clingy and affectionate.

Dwight drove me to the Asheville Airport. I remembered all the times John had either picked me up there, or dropped me off. Still, it wasn't the first time I'd been here since August, so the worst was over. My knee replacement had always made me a candidate for the great airport grope, or as I like to think of it, the "airport Macarena." It hadn't started off well. As I went through the scanner, the buzzer went off. Pulling my items aside to begin the inspection, the security lady asked, "Are you traveling alone?" To her astonishment, I burst into tears. "Yes," I sobbed, "all alone." The pat-down was much more thorough than it used to be, but I didn't take it personally.

The flight from Asheville to Charlotte was thankfully short. The man who sat next to me had the window seat, and before the plane took off, had already claimed the arm rest and most of the leg room. His left elbow dug so far into my right boob that I swear it's gone down a cup size. In the end, I sat sideways. My two hour lay-over in Charlotte meant that at least my checked-in luggage had a fighting chance of making it with me to my destination. Flying over Charlottesville is always a treat, particularly with the combination of mountains and snow.

Before I knew it, I was at Summit Square. I checked in at the desk with Brenda, got my key, and dropped the luggage off in my room. Picking up my red Santa hat, I set off to find Maman. After all, John might not be around anymore, but my mother was. You mourn the dead, but you take care of the living. Maman was having dinner in the dining room. Her face lit up when she saw me, and I knew this was exactly where

I should be for Christmas.

The week flew by. Frank, the activities coordinator, had a number of imaginative things planned. We played bingo. Groups came to sing. One day, a lady came to play the piano while we sang along. She chose tunes from a Christmas song book which contained both the usual traditional carols and some more modern fare. "Oh, here's one from Elvis that you probably know," she said, and began to play "Blue Christmas." "I'll have a blue, blue Christmas without you," the words went. Tears sprang to my eyes, and it took everything I had to not burst out crying. One of the nurses came over, and gave me a hug. She'd seen me from across the room, and came to my aid. Maman held my hand. It wasn't going to be an easy time, this first Christmas without John, but at least I was with people who were caring and supportive.

When we were growing up in Waynesboro, we had a family tradition – every year Daddy would pile us into the car at night, and drive all around town to look at the Christmas lights. Since Waynesboro had a population of fewer than 20,000 at the time, the tour could easily take in the whole town. The poorer section often had the most lights, and we wondered how they could afford the electric bills. The richer section of town often boasted large mansions with elegant columns – one single light in every window and a huge wreath tied with an elegant red bow on the front door. We always came back from that ride with stars in our eyes, and Christmas in our hearts.

We found out that Clyde, the driver at Summit Square, was taking a bus around to see the Christmas lights, so we signed up. Clyde had a special treat for us. Every year, one house is decorated to the hilt with lights which are timed to go on and off to a soundtrack of music available if you tune in to a particular radio frequency. We stopped to watch the entire program, which took about ten minutes. Call it delightful or tacky. The entire bus was grinning and swaying to the music. Although there probably wasn't a person among us under the age of 60, we were all kids again.

We did get our White Christmas, but much less of it than the rest of the East Coast. The cheesecake from Junior's in Brooklyn arrived – Maman's favorite – and I'd gotten her fresh raspberries and chocolate, too. We ate a delicious meal in the main dining hall, and watched Rick Steve's European Christmas DVD in the Gallery, where we'd listen to a hand bell choir the next day.

Before we knew it, I was packing my bags for the return to Highlands, a trip full of adventure. Getting to Charlottesville Airport, I found out that there was no seat for me on a flight from Charlotte to Asheville. The recent snow storms had left planes and crew scattered all over the country. If I could only wait until the next day, they could confirm an 8 a.m. departure. I was adamant. The cats had gone two days by themselves, due to the snowy roads in Highlands. The charming man behind the counter at US Airways, a pet lover himself, came up with a solution. He gave me a voucher for a cab to drive me and another passenger from Charlotte to Asheville. I spent the day with the best traveling companion ever – Deb, from Outward Bound in Bat Cave. We got our taxi – and its rather surly driver, who managed to get stopped for speeding. The cop must have seen our stricken faces, and let him off.

My friend, Lee, sent me Mark, a knight in shining armor, or rather a Jeep, to pick me up in Asheville, and while the roads were pretty clear most of the way, there was still lots of snow in Highlands. I tramped up the long flight of stairs to my new home, and threw open the door. Two very puzzled cats looked at me, not sure of who I was. "Mama's home," I cooed. They weren't so certain. Several hours later, however, life was back to normal. The snow glistened; the Christmas lights on Main Street sparkled. I settled down to watch TV. Orion was perched on the back of the sofa, with his head on my shoulder; Weasel was asleep on

New Year's Resolutions

Every year at this time many Americans look forward to a new year by making some resolutions to follow. In that respect, I am looking forward to a terrific 2011 and have made the following resolutions to adhere to.

tryanpotts@hotmail.com

I resolve to cheer for the Atlanta Falcons in the event that the New Orleans Saints do not make it to the Super Bowl. Actually, no I don't. If I could just cheer for the Falcons themselves it would be fine, but Falcons fans have turned out to be even more annoying than I originally imagined. Therefore, I resolve to cheer for Michael Vick and Philadelphia Eagles in the event that my Saints do not complete the "Two Dat."

I resolve to continue hating Brett Favre with every fiber of my being. (By hate I mean "sports hate" not "I hope something bad happens to him" hate) Not only did he completely embarrass himself this year with his lackluster performance on the field, but now he is caught up in two scandals involving inappropriate treatment of women. Normally at this point, I would begin to feel sympathy for Favre and lay off the old man, but all I have to do is just re-imagine Joe Buck slobbering all over him during last year's NFC Championship game and I instantly recharge the sports hate flowing through my veins.

I resolve to no longer feel empathy for UNC fans, as now that they have won three straight games against terrible teams they have climbed back aboard the bandwagon. Note to self UNC fans: you aren't supposed to throw Roy under the bus until AFTER he goes 8-20 like Matt Doherty did. UNC will be a force by the end of the year, and most of the bandwagoneer UNC fans will jump back on the high horse — but the ones who stuck by their team all along will be the ones who feel most vindicated — and rightly so.

I resolve to watch as much of Blake Griffin as possible. Seriously, do yourself a favor and go youtube some of Blake Griffin's highlights. The man is not just a dunking machine (although he is on par with guys like Vince Carter and Dominique Wilkins in that department) he plays with an energy that is not often seen in the NBA these days. Griffin has the power of a young Shawn Kemp but can handle the ball and even plays some defense for a LA Clippers team that is dreadful in most other departments. Speaking of the Clips, they have some nice young players in Griffin and Eric Gordon, but they will never be any good as long as Donald Sterling is holding the purse strings.

My final New Year's Resolution is to end the BCS once and for all. I will be going to Washington DC with a group of students next weekend, and I hope to have the opportunity to sit down with President Obama and figure out a way to end the BCS once and for all. It's ridiculous that a team like TCU can go undefeated, beat the hottest team in football in the Rose Bowl and still have no chance at a National Championship. Who wouldn't want to see TCU's defense up against the winner of Auburn and Oregon?

Have I mentioned that TCU's defensive coordinator is named Dick Bumpus? That in and of itself should explain the strength of TCU's defense in that no one makes fun of that guy at all, but instead wants to hire him to coach at their school!

Highlanders participate in holiday tournament

By Ryan Potts

Over the Christmas holiday the Highlanders and Lady Highlanders traveled to Walhalla, SC to participate in the Apple Classic tournament held annually at Walhalla High School.

On the girls' side, the Lady Highlanders took home a 2-1 record with victories over Upstate and Easley and a loss to Habersham Central.

Against Easley, the Lady Highlanders pulled away in the second half for a 53-34 win. Taylor Buras scored 11, Courtney Rogers scored 12 and Emily Munger scored 17 for the Lady Highlanders.

Against Upstate, the Highlanders pulled away early and finished with a comfortable 50-37 win. Munger led all scorers with 25 points for Highlands.

In the boys' bracket, the Highlanders finished 1-2 in the tournament with losses to Habersham Central and Upstate and a win over Greer Charter School.

Against Greer Charter the Highlanders never trailed and dominated throughout in a 71-35 victory. Robbie Vanderbilt led all scorers with 19 points.

In their third game of the tournament, the Highlanders came up a few points short against Upstate in what was one of the best games of the tournament. While Upstate led the majority of the first half, the Highlanders came back to take the lead in the third period.

After Upstate regained the lead late in the fourth, a frantic Highlander comeback was derailed by two untimely turnovers and some questionable officiating. Logan Schmitt and Josh Delacruz each had 14 points for the Highlanders, and Vanderbilt added 12 in the 59-55 defeat.

The Highlanders travel to Nantahala and Rabun Gap this weekend before returning home on Jan. 18 to face the Rosman Tigers.

Beethoven at Incarnation

The Episcopal Church of the Incarnation will host many exciting concerts this spring.

In a two-concert series, pianist Robert Henry and cellist Charae Krueger will perform Ludwig van Beethoven's complete Sonatas for piano and cello. The first concert is Sunday, January 9th at 2 p.m., and will feature Sonatas 1, 2, and 4. The second concert is Sunday, January 16th at 2 p.m., and will feature Sonatas 3 and 5.

"This is a rare opportunity for lovers of good music to experience all five Beethoven Sonatas for Piano and Cello," explains Robert. "I think these sonatas offer the same sort of musical biography as do the complete symphonies or the 32 piano sonatas. Everything is here, from the youthful bravado and classical lyricism of his early works to the mysticism and inward-looking spirituality of his late period — it's all packed into five sonatas."

With critically acclaimed debuts at Carnegie Hall and the Kennedy Center under his belt, pianist Robert Henry is Artist-in-Residence at Kennesaw State University. Gold Medalist in four International Piano Competitions, he has been hailed as a "consummate artist — brilliant, formidable, elegant, and the epitome of poise and control." Dr. Henry released his award-winning debut CD, Twelve Nocturnes and a Waltz, in 2010.

Cellist Charae Krueger is Principal Cellist for the Atlanta Opera Orchestra and the Atlanta Ballet Orchestra. She is the Cello Artist-In-Residence and professor at Kennesaw State University and performs with the KSU String Trio. She received her Bachelor of Music Performance degree from New England Conservatory in Boston. She also holds an Artist Diploma from the Longy School of Music in Cambridge MA.

Future concerts at Incarnation include Bach's Well-Tempered Clavier, Bk I (1-12), to take place on Sunday, February 20 at 2 p.m., with pianist Robert Henry.

All concerts are free. Donations accepted.

The practice of seeking God

Pastor Dan Robinson
Highlands
Central Baptist Church

There is an incredible verse of scripture found in Acts 17:26-27. It reads like this:
“From one man He made every nation of men, that they should inhabit the whole earth; and He determined the times set for them and the exact places where they should live. God did this so that men would seek Him.”
Theologians call this the doctrine of sovereignty. Clearly, the questions about sovereignty are many but the bottom line is simple. Namely, God loves the human race so much that He is acting, moving, changing and rearranging our “comings and goings” toward the end goal that we would see Him.

In my case, this meant a very brief move to San Diego in 1963. It was then and there that I became a Christian. God determined the time and the place where I should live. To view this doctrine from another angle, one writer puts it like this:

“What we owe to the unexpected and unplanned providences (sovereignty) in our lives is incalculable.”

The writer illustrates this by referencing the journal of David Brainerd:

“The list of missionaries who testify to the inspiration of Jonathan Edwards’s influence through the labor of love he expended in writing “The Life of David Brainerd” is longer than any of us knows: Francis Asbury, Thomas Coke, William Carey, Henry Martyn, Robert Morrison, Samuel Mills, Fredrick Schwartz, Robert M’Cheyne, David Livingstone, Andrew Murray. A few days before he died, Jim Elliot, who was martyred by the Aucas in 1956, entered in his diary, “Confession of pride – suggested by David Brainerd’s “Diary” yesterday – must become an hourly thing with me.” For 250 years, Edwards has been fueling the missionary movement with his biography of David Brainerd.”

Again, God determined the time and place where Brainerd should live.

Frankly, one might be tempted to shun this doctrine as foolish. Yet God says it’s true. And if I believe this truth, then I must draw a conclusion that says something like this: “If God has determined that I should live in Highlands as this time in my life, then “why?” Or, “What is His purpose in doing so?”

The Acts verse gives the answer: “God did this so men would seek Him.” How clear. How simple.

So friend, in all of your doings, seekings, plannings — don’t forget the most important thing — seeking God.

Do that through prayer, reading the Bible, confessing your sins, going to church and giving yourself to Jesus Christ without reservation. The result of that kind of life really is incalculable.

Most popular cosmetic surgery procedures

By Dr. Robert Buchanan Center for Plastic Surgery

Plastic Surgery continues to grow in popularity. Last year alone there were 12,500,000 procedures performed by Board Certified Plastic Surgeons in the US. One and a half million of them were surgical procedures. The other 11,000,000 were minimally invasive ones, such as Botox®, fillers and peels. Because many other physicians are attempting to do many of these procedures, especially the minimally invasive ones, and there is no way to track them, that number does not include what they do.

The total number of cosmetic procedures is up 69% since 2000. Minimally invasive procedures are up 99% over the same period. What is most popular varies from one part of the country to another. Here are the most popular surgical procedures, arranged in order for our specific area with national numbers from last year in parentheses:

1. Eyelid surgery (203,000): also called blepharoplasty, drooping upper eyelids and/or bags below the eyes are corrected by removing excess muscle and skin and rearranging fat. Women choose this far more often than men, though it is one of the most frequent procedures in men also. Recovery takes a week to 10 days.

2. Facelift (103,000): Although the older procedures really pulled rather than lifted, newer procedures finally live up to the name and lift the tissues back to where they were naturally. They are now also longer lasting and have a recovery of only several days to a week or so. Nationally, this is # 5, though it is more popular in the south.

3. Tummy Tuck (115,000): The abdomen is flattened during the surgery when extra fat and skin are removed, the muscles tightened, and the waist thinned. Although this was a procedure for women after childbirth, it is now very popular among men and women who have lost significant weight. Full recovery takes two to four weeks.

4. Breast Lift (87,000): This procedure, also called a mastopexy, raises, reshapes and firms sagging breasts. It removes extra skin and repositions the remaining tissue and nipples into a perkier position. Recovery is relatively rapid.

5. Breast Implant Revision (20,000): Although our revision rate is only 2%, nationally it is about 20%. This can be for many reasons including deflation, hardening, or change in attitude.

6. Liposuction (198,000): Just as the name implies, fat is sucked through a tube inserted beneath the skin out of areas where you don't want it using a vacuum-like device. The neck, abdomen, buttocks, hips, thighs, and upper arms are frequent beneficiaries. We use this frequently with other procedures including facelift and abdominoplasty. Recovery times range from several days to a week or so, but it may take several months for all the swelling to go down.

7. Breast Reduction (78,000): Although many of these procedures are reconstructive, most of the ones I do are cosmetic since they do not fit the arbitrary weight removed criteria set by the insurance companies. In spite of this, they are among the happiest patients I have. Recovery is rapid.

8. Male Breast Reduction (17,000): Removal of male breast enlargement, called Gynecomastia, takes many forms, depending on the amount of breast growth. This can be as large as that of a well-endowed woman. The numbers done do not reflect the relatively common occurrence of the problem.

9. Breast Augmentation (289,000): Nationally this is the most popular surgical procedure. Most are now done using the new form stable silicone implants. The way I do it, recovery is only a day or so.

10. Nose Remodeling (256,000): Called Rhinoplasty, this is nationally the second most common procedure. It is the reshaping of the nose to make it bigger or smaller, to narrow the span of the nostrils, thin the tip, or to change the angle between the nose and upper lip. Rhinoplasty is popular with men and women. Recovery is rapid, though you have a protective splint over the nose for 7-10 days and it takes 6-12 months for all the swelling to completely go down.

Though the surgical procedures take the spotlight, the non-surgical, minimally invasive ones account for most of the procedures done. This is due to their having essentially no down time and minimal expense. Our numbers reflect those nationally.

1. Botulinum Toxin (4,795,000): This injection blocks muscle action that causes wrinkles. It is most popular between the eyebrows, lateral to the eyes and in the forehead, though useful anywhere a muscle is causing a wrinkle.

2. Soft Tissue Fillers (1,722,000): These are natural substances injected into wrinkles, depressions or contour irregularities to correct them. The most common manufactured ones I use are Juvéderm® and Radiesse® because of their exceptional longevity. I also use a significant amount of fat. Though you have to harvest it, it is a permanent solution.

3. Chemical Peels (1,143,000): These are also quite varied. We use them to freshen the skin, remove spots, and to eliminate wrinkles and severe sun damage. I probably use them less than nationally, since we concentrate on other, less drastic, methods of skin rejuvenation.

4. Microdermabrasion (910,000): This painlessly removes the thickened outer dead cell layer of sun-damaged skin to freshen it.

to keep the taxpayers in mind and perhaps we should open our circle a little wider and ask people in the real estate community and others for help. We need to know what they know and we don't."

"Personal issues" included the opinions of the Chestnut Hill Retirement community homeowners who opposed the proposed location of apartment complex on Buck Creek Road and the "views" were of Highlands' taxpayers who want water and sewer offered in town before it is given outside town.

Paramount to the proposal's success was water and sewer connections when supplying such outside the town limits has been limited to the hospital, Zachary Field and most recently to Shortoff Baptist Church.

Then-Mayor Don Mullen told the taskforce not to get discouraged. "We didn't anticipate the complaints. I naively thought everyone would hop on the band wagon but they didn't," he said. "Every town similar to Highlands is working on getting or has some sort of affordable housing project including Breckenridge and Aspen, Colorado and Flagstaff, New Mexico. This issue is sweeping the country."

Due to the postponement it's not known exactly what Highlands Housing, Inc., was going to request or propose.

The Wednesday, Jan. 12 Town Board meeting is at 7 p.m. at the Community Building.

Dog owners beware

Dear Editor,

We would like to share our story with your readers with the hope that other pet owners will avoid the incident that we experienced over Christmas weekend with our dog, Jacob.

Innocently, we fed him a small pieces of fat from a beef roast and then on the next morning we gave him a small pieces of fat from a country ham.

He began to act sick a few hours later, then vomited and was very listless. This was on Monday.

We took him to see Dr. Brad Smith at the Wellness Animal Clinic on Tuesday and he immediately diagnosed a problem with his pancreas due to the ingestion of the fat, even though it was a very small amount. Jacob's body was unable to process the fat and due to the involvement of the pancreas and without Dr. Smith's correct diagnosis, we could have lost him if we had waited another day.

Jacob was put on an IV drip for 24 hours and now we are giving him a special dog food for a few days along with antibiotics. He is now recovering and we are so thankful.

This letter is to warn pet owners to be careful in feeding your animal from the table, especially anything such as pork or beef fat.

Bill and June Hogue

I hereby resolve....

I made a New Year's resolution and like all NYRs, it didn't last very long. Maybe 15 minutes. I know you are bored with the Global Warming/Climate Change issue, and I know you thought it was laid to rest after being debunked, but this is not the case. I'll get to the current problem, but first, a little fun.

From Environment News Service in December, 2009: "Snow and Ice across the planet are melting much faster than anticipated, and the cryosphere – the Earth's ice and snow cover – is very vulnerable to climate change, finds a new report presented today at the United Nations Climate Summit by former U. S. Vice President Al Gore and Norwegian Foreign Minister Jonas Gahr Store. Snow cover is diminishing, and glaciers from the Himalayas to the Alps are melting rapidly, with the reductions in the Andes and the Rockies, the report shows."

Perhaps Al should have sat with me the other day and watch nine inches of Christmas cheer fall on our property. I know, meaningless. But the folks in the northeast, specifically NYC and New Jersey, would tell you the 20-30 inches they got wasn't particularly insignificant. In the greater scheme of things, however, it doesn't prove much. Xinhuanet.com would have you know that "German capital Berlin has experienced more snow this month than any other December of past 100 years, as more bitter cold is expected in the country's east."

Isn't interesting that in heavily populated areas, for the past several years, catastrophic winters have occurred for all the world to see, but the areas Gore points to as evidently enjoying unusually balmy weather are viewed by polar bears and a handful of "scientists" financed, I'm sure, by Gore. How inconveniently convenient.

Maybe one of the most telling events of 2010 in the GW/CC arena is the fact that Al and Tipper Gore in the spring of 2010, bought an oceanfront villa in Montecito, CA for a paltry $9,000,000 +/- . Now, I can't find just how close to the ocean the news digs sit, but in view of the fact that Gore predicted the oceans would soon rise enormously, it seems strange that he would trust the waters to part and not affect his property. Maybe Tipper wasn't in on the decision and decided a couple of months after the purchase that their 40-year love affair was over. Who knows?

Getting back to the problem, even though Harry Reid couldn't muster enough votes in the old Senate to jam through cap-and-tax, and the new Senate would less inclined to do so, FoxNews.com says "After failing to get climate-change legislation through Congress, the Obama administration plans on pushing through its environmental policies through other means, and Republicans are ready to put up a fight.

On Jan. 2, new carbon emissions limits will be put forward as the Environmental Protection Agency prepares regulations that would force companies to get permits to release greenhouse gases under the Clean Air Act. Critics say the new rules are a backdoor effort to enact the president's agenda on global warming without the support (or consent) of Congress, and would hurt the economy and put jobs in jeopardy by forcing companies to pay for expensive new equipment."

Remember the big flap about "death panels" and the licking that Sarah Palin took when she (and others) sounded the alarm during the Obamacare debate? From The New York Times: "When a proposal to encourage end-of-life planning touched off a political storm over "death panels," Democrats dropped it from legislation to overhaul the health care system. But the Obama administration will achieve the same goal by regulation, starting Jan. 1.

Under the new policy, outlined in a Medicare regulation, the government will pay doctors for end-of-life care, which may include advance directives to forego aggressive life-sustaining treatment." Now here is the point. "While the new law (Obamacare) does not mention advance care planning, the Obama administration has been able to achieve its policy goal through the regulation-writing process, a strategy that could become more prevalent in the next two years as the president deals with a strengthened Republican opposition in Congress."

Charles Krauthammer writes in the Washington Post: "These regulatory power plays make political sense. Because Obama needs to appear to reclaim the center, he will stage his more ideological in yawn-inducing regulatory hearings rather than in the dramatic spotlight of congressional debate. How better to impose a liberal agenda on a center-right nation that regulatory stealth?

The promises of open and transparent government have long ago been proven to be nothing but the same old campaign lies. Did you expect anything else?
