Hospital data security exposed by IT vendor

Internet forensic investigation finds no access or illegal use of personal data

Last week, Highlands-Cashiers Hospital began notifying more than 25,000 patients that a data security screening of its computer systems uncovered a potential exposure of patient information. Many Highlands citizens have received letters about the breach.

This exposure was inadvertently caused by an outside

Town responds to FERC permit application

Having received the go-ahead from the Town Board at the November Town Board meeting, Mayor Pat Taylor submitted a response to the recent permit application with the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission to resurrect the old hydroelectric plant on the Cullasaja River.

Advanced Hydropower, Inc., of Clovis, CA, wants to get the plant up and running and plans to sell about $200,000 in green energy credits back to Duke Power.

The town is against the proposal for several reasons.

First, commissioners worry that the infrastructure associated with the plant will be environmentally detrimental to Highlands.

Second, though during the 2013 budget worksession it was

Changes to Bryson's 4th/ Main building OK'd by Planning Brd.

It would be an understatement to say how excited people are about changes coming to the building on the corner of Fourth and Main streets.

At previous Planning and Zoning Board meetings a new two-story building with shops on the bottom and apartments up top was given the green light.

But at the November Planning Board meeting, the project was back on the table with significant changes. The existing building will stay but changes will be made to the interior layout and the exterior which will include an addition on the Fourth Street side stretching to the sidewalk.

The current building will be renovated and divided into three units with one accessed from Main Street and the other two accessed from a new covered walk-

About what's coming up ...

I enjoyed the lighting of the Christmas tree and decorations on Saturday night.

The traditional wreaths and lanterns are in keeping with Highlands old fashion, village image.

I also am looking forward to being in our Christmas parade this coming Saturday.

In the spirit of open government, I want to disclose that my wife of 34 years, Sallie, will not be riding with me in this year's parade. Let me dispel any potential rumors in advance. We are not getting a divorce, everything is just fine at the Taylor household. As the Executive Director of the Bascom, Sallie and members of the staff will be at a large professional gathering in Miami called Art Basel.

In her place, I have made the decision to invite our two grandchildren to ride with me in Alan Lewis' classic Model

Highlands Mayor
Patrick Taylor

T. I look forward to riding with Henry who is one, and Eliza who is two. I make this decision at my own peril, and I am fully aware that things could go south at any moment on the parade route..

The mayor joyfully embraces the risk of having to deal with two crying babies all at once rolling down Main Street. It is analogous to being on duty as mayor, in that sometimes I have to deal with multiple problems all at once. What could possibly go wrong? Like everyone, we have model grandchildren of perfect comportment. If you see a beautiful young woman walking down the sidewalk keeping pace with the Model T, that will be my daughter and their mother. She has agreed to serve as my back up if problems occur.

I am optimistic that everyone will have a great time. Hope to see everyone at this Highlands classic, the Christmas Parade.

In defense of all electric consumers...

Dear Editor,

The Town of Highlands has a well recorded history of using our tax dollars to run rough shod over citizens who don't have the resources to defend themselves.

As an attorney I can defend myself and the rights and interests of all of Highlands electrical consumers and citizens.

Town Manager Frye evidently thinks overly priced and substandard electrical service can continue to be stuffed down our throats.

I plan to personally pursue my lawsuit, not only on my behalf, but on behalf of all of the consumers of electricity in the Town of Highlands.

A nation of laws

Dear Editor,

As I predicted in this newspaper weeks ago, Officer Darren Wilson of the Ferguson, PD would NOT be indicted on criminal charges. The Grand Jury did as I predicted, they followed the law. Praise the Lord, we are still a nation of laws. Regardless of your personal feelings, we must always follow the law. As a 28-year police veteran, I recall that the law did not always work in my favor but I always respected it.

Now Darren, his wife and unborn child, need a place to hide away from the ugliness of the big cities; a quiet, off the beaten path place where his family can live without fear of being murdered.

Does anyone have any ideas?

Systems, Inc. (CPSI), with whom the hospital contracted for specialized computer services.

In letters sent to homes, the hospital assured its patients and employees that forensics investigators found "no evidence that this information was accessed via the internet or used in any way at all after the breach."

The exposure was identified on September 29, 2014 during a routine security screening.

This assessment revealed a misconfiguration performed by the third party TruBridge, an HCH vendor specializing in healthcare information technology services, which caused computer servers containing names, addresses, dates of birth, treatment information, diagnoses, health insurance information, and for some patients, social security numbers, to be accessible without firewall protection via the internet, for a time period between May, 2012 through September, 2014.

According to hospital officials, the reason only some social security numbers were leaked is because "the only information that was inadvertently made accessible was on a server where individuals' information varied; some did not have SSNs on the server."

agreed that the $4.5 million it would take to rejuvenate the plant would not be worth the investment, commissioners feel the option is still on Highlands' table.

Third, they don't really want an outside company benefitting from an enterprise in Highlands' backyard especially since the final word has not been said on the matter. (To see the entire story, go to www.highlandsinfo.com, click on Local News and then on the Nov. 26 edition.)

The town had about 10 days to respond to Advanced Hydropower's permit application with FERC.

The mayor's response follows:

"The Town of Highlands, North Carolina would like to respond to Advanced Hydropower, Inc.'s Project No. 14623-000 and the Notice of Preliminary Permit Application for Filing and Soliciting Comments, Motions to Intervene, and Competing Application filed on May 6, 2014 with notice being advertised in the October 8, 2014 edition of the Franklin Press. Since we are an incorporated municipality of North Carolina that held the original FERC license and built the original power house cited in the application, the duly elected Town Board of Highlands affirms the town as a stakeholder in this proposed project and must be principals in deciding related issues. Furthermore, the Town of Highlands does own the hydroelectric dam located on Lake Sequoyah that was identified in the submitted application. Furthermore, the town is the owner of record of the Highlands Hydroelectric Building.

"The Town Board of Highlands has several concerns about the application submitted by Advanced Hydropower, Inc. First, the town questions methodology in presenting the public notice. Highlands has a newspaper that is authorized to publish legal, public notices. The legal notice of this application was not run in any newspapers in our municipality, but rather published in a newspaper that is located 20 miles from Highlands and primarily serves a different community.

"Second, the mayor of Highlands was listed as a pri-

"But as soon as we discovered this, we took immediate steps to secure the server and our forensic investigation found no evidence that the information was accessed through the internet or used in any way at all," officials said.

"We take our responsibility to protect our patient's information and privacy very seriously," said Craig James, President, Highlands-Cashiers Hospital. Upon discovering the exposure, HCH immediately put safeguards in place to protect the information and secure the servers and conducted a thorough investigation, including hiring an outside expert computer forensics company to analyze the server and look for evidence of access or use of its information.

"It is important to note that after a thorough investigation conducted by an outside computer forensics company expert in cyber security, no evidence was found that personal data was accessed via the internet or used in any way and we have been assured by computer specialists that the information is no longer accessible via the internet," said

James. "Still, we certainly appreciate the concern this may cause and in an abundance of caution we are offering our patients and employees whose social security number was on the server a one-year membership to a data protection service free of charge."

The service is Experian's® ProtectMyID® Alert.

Officials reiterated that a forensic investigation found no evidence that the information was accessed through the internet or used in any way at all.

They also recommend that patients of the hospital regularly review the explanation of benefits statement from their health insurer. "If there are services listed that weren't received, please immediately contact your insurer," they said.

To further support patients and answer their questions, HCH has established a toll free number 1-888-227-1416, which also is included in the notification letters and is available 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Friday.

way running parallel to the building on Fourth Street.

The existing roof will be removed and replaced with a metal gable and shed roof which will give the structure more height.

The existing brick will be painted and stone, horizontal siding and cedar shingle siding will be used to give the structure a "mountain" feel.

Two additional units will be added to the building along the Fourth Street side – which is why this time the application before the Planning Board was to consider an addition to an existing building.

Access to the new units will be from the covered walkway. In addition, an open walkway will be constructed between the new units and Fourth Street from which there will be direct access to the covered walkway.

Several landscape garden areas are planned between the building units facing Fourth Street as well as along the existing brick walkway on Main Street and the front of the buildings facing Fourth Street.

Units 2 and 3 will be part of the existing building and will be accessed from the covered walkway stretching from Main Street toward Oak Street. Only unit number 1 will be accessed from Main Street.

With a "yes" from the Planning Board, the project goes to the Zoning Board on Dec. 10 for a Special Use Permit. The Zoning Board meeting is at 5:30 p.m. in the Community Building.

There will also be a Zoning Board meeting on Dec. 17 at 5:30 p.m. in the Community Building to rehear the John Shearl case.

This case has plagued the town since August 2009 when the Highlands Zoning Board of Adjustment upheld the town's Zoning Administrator's ruling that Shearl's J&J Lawn & Landscaping business activities were encroaching on the residential portion of his split-zoned property on NC 28 south.

Shearl sued the town and appealed an earlier court decision and this time the court ruled that the case should be heard again by the Highlands Zoning Board.

Specifically, On Sept. 2, 2014, the NC Court of Appeals remanded the case to the Superior Court with instructions to order further proceedings before the Highlands Zoning Board.

mary principal in the application, yet no one from Advanced Hydropower, Inc. notified his office of their intent to apply for renewal of the town's expired FERC license. Since the town's hydroelectric dam and lake where many residents have homes, are located next to the proposed project, the Town of Highlands requests better communication of the intent and progress of this proposed project. We believe continuous updates and requests for input should be made to the town by the applicant.

"Third, the Town of Highlands hired McGill and Associates, an area engineering firm, in 2013 to assess the feasibility of the town renewing their FERC license and resuming hydroelectric generation using the old power plant building. McGill's report indicated such a project could potentially have a major impact on the sensitive environment of a "wild" naturally flowing river. Also, such proposed operations would be adjacent to a scenic highway and impact a historic community site. At the time of McGill's report to the town board on the feasibility of resuming hydrogeneration, many citizens and community leaders expressed concerns about these issues. Those same concerns have emerged as the public has learned about this proposed project at the Nov. 20, 2014 Highlands Town Board Meeting."

As of Tuesday there were four comments on the FERC site concerning the application. To file a comment go to www.ferc.gov. In the eLIBRARY at the top of the page, type in docket # is P-14623.

According to Christiane Casey with FERC, after 60 days the commission will consider all comments and motions and take final action on the application.

Tate named Vice-Chair to MC Board of Commission

During a special called meeting of the Macon County Board of Commissioners Monday night, a unanimous vote appointed James Tate, the board's Highlands representative, as vice-chairman.

In the past, the board has elected both a Democrat and a Republican to the positions of chair and vice-chair to remain balanced, but Monday night, Commissioner Ronnie Beale, the lone Democrat on the board, made a motion to appoint Tate as vice-chair.

The appointment of chair and vice-chair came shortly after Commissioner Ronnie Beale, Commissioner James Tate and newcomer Gary Shields, who were all elected to the board in November, took their Oath of Office. While Beale and Tate were re-elected and will retain their seats, Shields will be replacing Ron Haven on the board.

More from Elmer and Sonny

Sonny, you're like an itch I can't get rid of. Anyway, come on up on the porch and set a spell. Whatcha got on your little brain this time?"

Sorry about that Elmer. You've got to admit that as the world's greatest philosophers, you are irresistible. Aristotle and Plato had nothing on you.

But yeah, I'd like to get your thoughts on a couple of things. One is about why folks don't read more. Seems they get their knowledge from television programs about Ancient Space Aliens and reality shows.

"I don't have an answer to that, sonny, unless maybe laziness or they figure they already know all they need to know. People don't read books anymore and that's a real shame. People quit learning when they get out of school. The problem is that it's these folks who vote. So what got you riled up?"

I was gabbing with a couple of friends about religion the other day and when I mentioned Carl Sagan's famous comment that "we are made of star stuff," one of them started laughing and told me I was nuts. All of them were completely flabbergasted.

"Well, where the heck did they think all the chemicals in our bodies come from?"

We know the chemicals came from exploding stars and were it not for supernovae, we wouldn't even be here.

There sure ain't no magician out there waving a magic wand in the sky."

Maybe folks just depend on comic books for knowledge.

There's a world of information out there if folks will pick up a book and read.

"Yeah, now days if you read you're considered a geek. Most folk's knowledge comes from political bumper stickers or misinformation that spreads like a virus on the Internet."

I saw one the other day where they had actually changed the words president Obama used in a speech with some tricky editing. It was a forgery. How do we get facts when that sort of thing goes on?

What worries me, with all the scientific knowledge we have now, how do we get the public to make decisions if they don't read and don't know about that knowledge.

"Ain't gonna be easy, sonny. Worse than that, many of our lawmakers are scientific dummies trying to run a country. Without knowledge, we can't hope to cure the world's problems. Science is gaining that knowledge and we need it to make this a better world.

What was your other question, sonny?"

Well, I guess you've read about the amazing advances we've made in genetic engineering in the last two years and what the implications are.

"Sure have, and they hold the promise of a new world out there for us. Genetic engineering may soon find a cure for Alzheimer's, Parkinson's, cystic fibrosis to HIV and many other diseases. Scientists have found ways to deliver genes to the point where it's needed."

Yeah, even regenerating failed heart muscles, rebuilding a failed liver and would you believe we may even be able to cure schizophrenia. We already know that violent criminals lack activity in their prefrontal cortex so if we have a cure for schizophrenia, we should be able to restore activity to someone's prefrontal cortex and that's where folks feel empathy for others.

"I gotta tell you if we finally can cure mental illness, our legal system will go into spasms. Religions won't have any more sin to deal with if what they call sin turns out to be nothing more than a genetic defect."

That brings up an ethical question. If some day we can cure a murderer of a mental disorder, do we let them out of jail?

"Like I said, sonny, the legal and religious systems will go into spasms and likely put up a fight to stop scientists from playing God and curing people of diseases that might affect their control over things.

What are the advantages of buying and selling your home in the winter?

As unique as our area is, it is not unique in one of the major advantages for Buyers and Sellers to conduct transactions over the winter months. That advantage, in most of the country, is that there is less competition when you look to buy or sell during the winter.

As a whole, most view the spring and summer as the prime time to list homes as well as look for homes. Savvy Buyers and Sellers have the advantage of less competition in both the real estate part of the picture as well as associated areas.

With the reduction of inventory as many remove their homes from the winter real estate sales market, Sellers get more advertising and emphasis on their homes from their Realtors.

With fewer people looking for homes, Buyers also are able to have more of a busy Realtor's attention. The mortgage, appraisal and home inspection vendors have more time and can get to your needs quicker. Most homes need some amount of work done to them and the builders and contractors are also typically less busy thus your ability to get the work done at a more competitive price is greater. Moving companies also tend to be slower and offer more deals and incentives in the winter months.

Buyers, after the holidays, typically have more time on their hands as opposed to the busy, outdoor focused summer months. In our area, Buyers can take advantage of off-season hotel rates, retail sales and as a rule will get to know the local people and culture more readily than during high season. In this area in particular, what you see is what you get in the winter months. With the leaves off of the lush landscape you will see the area surrounding the homes under consideration. This can be very valuable in home buying and crucial if you are considering purchasing raw land.

Sellers, while the advantages are not as specific, to have your home on the market when there are fewer inventory possibilities for Buyers is always a positive. It is also a great time to take advantage of the slower months for contractors to get those items done that will add more value to and take away more objections from your home. Showing a Buyer that the home is being cared for by the Seller is usually a positive selling factor.

In conclusion, while the Highlands/Cashiers Plateau is known as a summer resort area, as a Buyer or Seller of mountain property, don't overlook the advantages of the winter market.

The Bolshoi Ballet Live in HD at PAC on Sunday

The Performing Arts Center continues Live in HD Series with the Bolshoi Ballet on Sunday, December 7 at 12:55 pm with La Bayadere.

When the beautiful dancer Nikiya and the warrior Solor meet in secret, they swear eternal mutual fidelity. However, the High Brahmin, who is also in love with Nikiya, overhears them. He rushes to reveal their secret to the Rajah, who has decided that Solor will marry his beloved daughter Gamzatti.

La Bayadère (the word refers to an Indian temple dancer) is a key work in the classical repertoire and this is a magnificent production. The story of impossible love between Nikiya and Solor is set against the backdrop of a lush, mysterious India. Marius Petipa's choreography, here in a new scenic version by Yuri Grigorovich, is exquisite; the scene known as The Kingdom of the Shades is one of the most celebrated in the history of ballet. Bolshoi principals Svetlana Zakharova and Maria Alexandrova bring the characters of this romantic ballet to life.

Parade dance dedicated to Levinson

On December 6, Mountain Garden Club members will dance in memory of Joan Levinson during the Highlands Olde Mountain Christmas Parade.

"Joan was amazingly talented," said Dr. Becky Schilling. "She created spectacular costumes. She also danced into her 90s and carried our banner. She brought style and grace to everything she did."

Educated at the Massachusetts School of Design, Levinson worked as a furrier and sportswear designer. Her patterns and designs were used by Lands End, Eddie Bauer, Norm Thompson and others.

Levinson helped create parade magic in Highlands for 16 years. She also served as Mountain Garden Club treasurer for many years, spearheaded novel fundraising ideas, and helped with the club's scholarship program. She passed away on September 14.

Who Counseled God?

By Pastor Sam Forrester
Whiteside Presbyterian Church

The Bible declares God to be sovereign. That means he alone is responsible for the governing of this world. Everything you see, hear, feel, taste, and smell comes from the creative power of God. God made all things and all out of nothing. The question we have to ask is: Who was there for him to ask counsel from?

God is completely sufficient unto himself, needing nothing or no one. Yet, he is a God moved by his own being to create. So, before the foundations of this world were laid, he devised a plan to create a world and rule over it. He decided to create mankind and from that mass of humanity to redeem a people unto himself (2 Corinthians 6:16-18). All this was decided before any work was done to bring our world into existence. In all of this massive undertaking, who gave this sovereign God any counsel?

The sacrifice of Jesus Christ was ordained before the foundations of this world were laid (1 Peter 1:20 & Revelation 13:8). Who was there to counsel God? He provided for those that would hear the Good News. God gives them new hearts with which to fear him (Ezekiel 36:24-26, Jeremiah 31:31-34) and the Holy Spirit watches over them to see the work begun in them is carried out to completion (Philippians 1:6). Who was there with God to give him counsel?

There is no one to counsel God for there is none but the Triune God. It is the Triune God who made all things (Acts 15:18), it is this same Triune God this very day sustaining all things (Hebrews 1:3). Dear ones, he doesn't seek the counsel of anyone about how to run his creation. He is the Sovereign Lord Almighty. He and he alone is in control of this world. Scripture says, he has the hairs on your head numbered. He knows when each sparrow falls (Luke 12:6,7). He is working out his plan and no effort of a man or any other creature will change the number of those chosen unto eternal salvation (Ephesians 1:3-5,11; Acts 13:48). Nothing can prevent the day he appoints to bring his people into glory (Job 42:2). Why? Because he is

Death of lost teen defined

On Monday, November 24, Pathologist Dr. William L. Selby conducted an autopsy of Alec Lansing, the teenager who walked away from Trails Carolina campsite on November 10, 2014.

The cause of death indicated was Hypothermia. An additional significant factor in this autopsy that was noted by Dr. Selby was a broken hip.

Investigators who were present on scene where the body of Lansing was found noted evidence of removed moss from a tree which leaned over the small stream in which Lansing was found on Saturday, November 22.

Investigators believe Lansing had scaled the tree and fallen into the shallow stream, resulting in the broken hip rendering him immobile.

sovereign. What a great comfort we as believers can take in this knowledge, "Not by might nor by power, but by My Spirit, says the Lord Almighty" (Zechariah 4:6).

The prophet in Isaiah 50:9 declares it is the Sovereign Lord who helps him. It is only the Sovereign Lord who can declare your sins forgiven. He did that for everyone who would hear and believe and he did it before the creation of this world. Who was there for him to counsel with? There was none. Salvation is of God alone. Open your ears and hear his call. The apostle John laid it out so clearly in John 3:16 "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whoever believes in him should not perish but have everlasting life." Your salvation is a gift from the Sovereign Lord and he alone deserves the glory for it.

Varsity Volleyball team travels to Clemson University

The Lady Highlanders volleyball team had the opportunity to attend volleyball camp this past summer which was hosted here in Highlands School by Wake Forest.

Head Coach Ken Murczek and his assistant coach and wife Jen Murczek traveled from Winston-Salem to spend a valuable couple of days with the girls.

Before leaving, they invited the girls to attend their volleyball game when the Lady Demon Deacons traveled in November to face Clemson's Lady Tigers. The Lady Highlanders too them up on their invitation and on Sunday, Nov. 24 traveled to Clemson with Coach Katie and her family.

Despite the downpour of rain, the girls had a great experience. They had the opportunity to take pictures with the Clemson Tigers team mascot as well as some team players. The plan was also to tour Clemson's campus but due to weather that didn't happen.

Instead they went downtown to do some shopping in the sports stores.

Before leaving to travel back to Winston-Salem with his team, Coach Ken met with the girls to give them some words of encouragement for next season. Before the season begins next year, Coach Ken will come back to Highlands to host their volleyball camp.

The Lady Demon Deacons took the game from the Lady Tigers winning three straight sets.

The scientists have a few years to go after their recent discoveries, but in time, it will come.

Hopefully, we will be able to detect defective genes and correct them while a fetus is still in the womb. Think about a world free of screwballs, a world without terrorists bent on destroying the world.

Your cell phone is ringing, sonny."

Bob answered, "Yes dear, right away love.... no I won't forget to pick up toilet paper on the way home. I'm leaving now, dear."

Got to go Elmer. Orders from High Command. Hope to see you again.

"Better hurry if you want supper."

I want to update the progress on several projects.

The 3rd Street wall project is on schedule. The lowering of the lake to begin the dam repair and water intake installation is still scheduled for December 15. The first culvert of the flood plain project on Laurel Street should be installed within the next few weeks. A contract for the covered swimming pool will be up for approval at the December 11 Town Board meeting.

I also continue to do the mayor's walk at 5 p.m. on Tuesday afternoons. On a recent walk I discovered our friends, the bears, have been carrying off garbage bags and thereby leaving a mess on the side slopes of Oak Street. I'm looking for volunteers to help me remove the trash. Give me a call at 828-506-3138, if you want to help.

Meanwhile, the town staff is working on better bear proof commercial dumpsters. We all need to be conscious of what is placed in trash containers that attracts our furry friends.
