Prisoners' medical issues a big part of inmate care

When county detention centers take an inmate into custody, it becomes the inmate's home away from home in every regard.

Everything from the inmates' meals to their medication becomes the responsibility of the

EMS asks the public to fill out fire system survey

Macon County is conducting a study of the county's fire protection system with the intent of developing a strategic plan to ensure the future success of the system and identify any potential challenges.

"The study was not initiated just because of the fire situation in 2016, but the serious fire conditions and the enormity of the situation did reiterate how much we rely on our mostly volunteer fire protection system," said Warren Cabe, director of MC Emergency Service. "It reemphasized that we need to make sure we are doing all we can to meet the needs of the departments and the customers they serve."

while often times picking up the tab to do so.

For Macon County, providing medical care for inmates has long since been a point of contention because the cost of medicating inmates eats up a large portion of Macon County Sheriff Robert Holland's annual budget.

"It used to be impossible to budget the healthcare needs of inmates." said Holland, "Some years we would set aside $100,000 in

Macon County meth dealer sentenced to 70+ years in prison

At the conclusion of a fiveday jury trial that began last week in Macon County Superior Court Brodie Hamilton, 31, of Franklin was convicted of Trafficking in Methamphetamine by Possession, Trafficking in Methamphetamine by Transportation, and Conspiracy to Traffic in Methamphetamine. He was sentenced Friday to a maximum of 70 1/2 years in prison, and he will serve at least 56 years before he is eligible for release.

The case was tried by District Attorney Ashley Welch and Assistant District Attorney Eric Bellas. The Honorable Bill Coward was the presiding and sentencing judge. The case was investigated by the Macon County Sheriff's Office.

The evidence presented by the District Attorney's Office proved that Hamilton was a known methamphetamine dealer in Macon County with a customer base from several surrounding western mountain counties including Jackson and Swain counties. He dealt methamphetamine out of his residence in Macon County over a period of time and had been a methamphetamine dealer in Macon County for several years except for a period of time when he was in the Georgia prison system serving a sentence for Trafficking in Cocaine.

On June 19, 2015, Hamilton sent two young meth addicts to the Atlanta area to purchase over two pounds of crystal methamphetamine for him.

That evening as a result of an ongoing narcotics investigation, several MC Sheriff's officers including Lieutenant Charles Moody, Detective Matthew Breedlove, First Sergeant Clay Bryson, Detective David Blanton and Deputy Josh Stewart, intercepted a vehicle in Macon County that contained over two pounds of crystal methamphetamine that was being delivered to Hamilton.

Hamilton was eventually ar-

Preparing for the 2017-'18 budget

It is a quieter time of the year in Town Hall. It can be viewed as the lull before the storm of activity in planning a new budget. I was on a short vacation last week. I returned Monday to discover several staff and citizen meetings that I need to attend in the coming weeks. Most are related to budget priorities. Commissioners are engaged in similar sessions.

The town department heads are not taking it easy this month. On the contrary, they are devoting substantial amounts of their workdays to developing a list of priorities and needs for their respective areas. At the annual town retreat department heads will identify these major needs for inclusion in the new budget. Town commissioners will ask questions and engage in discussions with the staff. The retreat is primarily an information gathering process.

The town retreat will be held again in Coleman Hall at the Highlands Presbyterian Church. It is scheduled for Tuesday, March 7, commencing at 9 am.

The Town Manager and department heads will use the commissioners' feedback to develop and refine their proposed budgets for FYI 2017/'18. The whole process will continue through a workshop series in April and May. The Town Manager will continue adjusting and tuning the budget. Workshops will be at the Highlands Conference Center with dates announced later. After a public hearing at the June town board meeting, a final budget will be adopted.

In the three years I have been involved in budget planning, I have dubbed the first draft the "dream draft" where about every valid need is listed. But, as commissioners review budget drafts, the question of what is a valid request versus what is an essential need will recur. By the last workshop the final draft will have been cut down to a workable budget. Some good projects will be postponed for another year. Essential needs, like the replacement of the failing Big Horn water tank, always take top priority.

Here are several assumptions that I'm making as we enter the budget planning process.

I see no property tax increase on the horizon, and no major increase in utility rates in this new budget. Electric costs are stable. Water/sewer rates had a small increase this past year, so they should remain stabile. Sanitation rates were increased and commercial accounts adjusted at mid-year. The Town Board, as always, will decide pri-

Never stop marching ast week's letter-tothe-editor by Dr. Patti Wheeler entitled "Why women must continue to march" took guts. She should be admired for putting a face to the discrimination women continue to be subjected to in the workplace – even here in Highlands.

Is discrimination in the workplace as bad as it has been in the past? Probably not – thanks to those who have fought along the way – but it still exists.

Is every workplace guilty of it? I would say no, not if it is run by fair, forward-thinking men and women who believe men and women are equal.

The fact is, past, present or future discrimination against women was and is unjust as well as just plain stupid.

As Jim noted, the movie "Hidden Figures" showed what happened to the U.S. space program when the potential of its women – white and black – was ignored. The Russians beat us!

But just because something is "better than it used to be" doesn't mean it's OK or that it should be considered the status quo.

Until women are considered truly equal in the workplace, be paid what their male counterparts are paid, and be respected body and soul, they should continue to march, and hopefully be supported by the men in their lives to do so.

Though my mother was a stay-at-home mom, my parents, particularly my father, always said I could be anything I set my mind

I quickly learned how hard it was for women to be taken seriously in the workplace, especially if they were "easy on the eyes," as people are apt to say.

Like every other working woman I know, old and young,

I have suffered my share of abuse. As Patti said "If you haven't, you are most fortunate. That is not the way of the world...."

For me there have been countless subtle infractions, but three incidents were major to me.

Back in the late '70s, Jim and I graduated from the University of Houston and so made our home there.

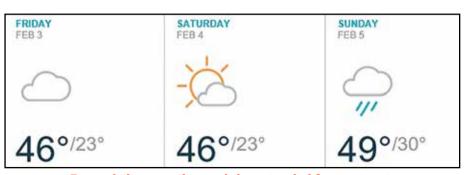

My third job after graduating from college was as production manager for a news magazine.

I was ecstatic! Here I could put all my journalistic skills to work – everything I'd learned in school and gleaned along the way in previous jobs. It was a huge responsibility that required long hours and interaction with every department – news, advertising and production. But I was OK with that and Jim backed me every step of the way.

One day the Advertising Director visited me in my office where I was working at the layout table on that week's issue. We discussed potential advertisers, features that Go my sisters, Go!

Dear Editor,

I want to applaud Dr. Patti Wheeler for writing the letter in last week's paper, exposing the discrimination she experienced as an affluent, white, educated woman. I can only imagine what it must be like for women of lesser means in our country and around the world.

No one in our society—man or woman--is entirely free of sexism, though we have come a great distance in the last 100 years. Just as the Civil Rights Act of 1964 didn't end racism, the progress made by women in the last century has not brought an end to sexism. Centuries of conditioning are difficult to overcome.

Even more insidious than overt sexism is internalized sexism, the way we as women sometimes view ourselves due to attitudes we learned early in life. As a woman, as well as rested hiding under a bed after law enforcement searched for him for approximately two months. Hamilton was found guilty of all charges.

"This conviction keeps a dangerous methamphetamine dealer off the streets for essentially the rest of his life and sends a strong message to the community that the District Attorney's Office places the highest priority on protecting our community from the plague and poison that is methamphetamine," said District Attorney Ashley Welch. "I commend all of the dedicated professionals in law enforcement who partner with the District Attorney's Office to make our communities a safer place to live and the MC Sheriff's Office for a job well done. Methamphetamine ruins lives and Brodie Hamilton is responsible for ruining countless lives in our community. This sentence ensures that he will not be able to distribute this poison into our community again."

Sheriff Robert Holland commended the work of the MC Sheriff's Office and the DA and said the conviction is a message that these crimes have no place in Macon County.

"Brodie Hamilton is a 31 year-old man, not a child," said Sheriff Holland. "He had multiple convictions for drugs and other crimes throughout the years and has never shown one ounce of remorse or effort to change his life. Our case was proven in a court of law that he was a drug dealer, a drug dealer that arranged multiple pounds of methamphetamine to come from Atlanta to Macon, Jackson and Swain counties. A unanimous guilty verdict was handed down by a jury of his peers. He deserves every minute of every day he was given."

The Greenway helps to beautify The Bascom campus

The Bascom and the Highlands Plateau Greenway have partnered in an effort to enhance and beautify part of the Greenway trail that is situated on a portion of The Bascom's 6-acre campus.

The Bascom Art Center is located on the historic Crane property at Oak Street and Franklin Road in Highlands. In addition to rustic barns that house art galleries and studios, the campus features the rolling green of the Winkler Sculpture and Nature Trail, a segment of the Highlands Plateau Greenway.

The Bascom and the Highlands Plateau Greenway have worked collaboratively in the past to improve the trail. Improvement projects include:

Rotating installation of sculptures along the pathway

Construction and installation of the outdoor classroom amphitheaters, the Susie Day Pavilion by the creek, the Will Henry Stevens Covered Bridge, and a salvaged corn crib

An outdoor sculpture biennial exhibition

The publication of The Bascom Nature Trail Guide, by naturalist Mark Warren, which investigates indigenous plants through the lens of Cherokee tradition

A recent trail extension undertaken by teenage volunteers from the Mountain Retreat and Learning Center, connecting to the rear entrance of The Bascom with winding steps and a handrail The next undertaking for this part of the Greenway is the construction of two benches and one arching trailhead behind The Bascom's main building, near Oak Lane. The project will be carried out by artist, fabricator, and furniture maker, Eric Araujo.

He is owner and principal Fabricator at Maven Designs, LLC, and an Installation Specialist for the Museum of Modern Art and the Solomon R. Guggenheim Museum.

Araujo will begin a three month Sculpture Fellowship at The Bascom in March. During his fellowship, he will construct three sculptural and functional additions to the Greenway trail, and teach school children and adults, visit classrooms, provide public lectures, and visit Western Carolina University art studios to educate in the name of community outreach.

The Highlands Plateau Greenway and The Bascom are seeking community support to underwrite the cost of this collaborative effort. As the conversation wrapped up, I turned back to my work at which point he grabbed my butt.

If this has never happened to you, let me explain how it feels. Basically, you have been violated. No not raped, no it wasn't skin on skin – but it may as well have been. It seared me in more ways than one.

It quickly became clear that the professional conversation I thought we were having – equal to equal – was really just a way to be alone with me until there was an opening to touch me. That hurt.

He didn't stick around for a retort or a reaction.

I was shocked – with thoughts instantly racing through my mind.

Should I report him? If I do, would it be my word against his? Would anyone care? Would I lose my job? Should I tell Jim? If I do, what would happen next? If he kicked his butt – which I was pretty sure he would do – I would lose my job and also probably have to come up with bail money to get him out of jail after he was arrested for assault and pay attorney fees after that.

Don't laugh. These really are the things that go through a working woman's mind when she is the victim of inappropriate behavior.

The next time that comes to mind was the mid-'80s. I had re-entered the corporate world when we were living in Charleston, SC. Megan had just turned one; Rachel was a month shy of turning three. It was time for two, full-time, steady paychecks.

Jim was a teacher at Burke High School on the Charleston peninsula – not far from the house – and I was a technical writer for a software company across the Cooper River in Mt. Pleasant. Jim had to be at work before me, so I would get myself and the girls ready and then head to Mt. Pleasant where I would drop them at child care and then go to the office. Mornings were always rushed and hectic.

One morning as I was making my way through the parking lot to the front door of the office, I found myself walking next to the founder and owner of the company.

We exchanged pleasantries and I remarked at how crazy life could be and made some joke about getting to work and dealing with the girls.

Without missing a step, he said "Well, you shouldn't be here anyway ... you should be home raising your children."

I was flabbergasted.

More than half his workforce were women and many of them had children. Was that what he thought of us even though he required college degrees and experience prior to working for him?

Or was he speaking only to me?

I quickly checked my shoes and my dress. Thankfully, this day both shoes were the same color and my dress wasn't on inside out. And yes, once I did go to work with one black shoe and one navy blue shoe on, and yes, once I did have my droppedwaist, T-shirt style dress – that was all the rage back then – on inside out.

As I said, life was hectic.

This place of employment was where I was also told that the male technical writer in our group, who did not have a bachelor degree, BTW, nor more experience writing, made more money than I did because he had a family to support.

Say what? Wasn't I working to support my family? How did that compute?

And finally, like Patti, that brings me to Highlands.

As you all know I worked for The Highlander newspaper for five years before Jim and I started Highlands Newspaper. But you may not know why we did.

At one point, while News Editor, I was asked to hold down the fort – while CNI, the Athens, GA-based parent company of the paper – sought a new publisher for The Highlander. This I did, while also applying for the job myself. Though I was passed over, I stayed. Two years later I was asked to once again hold down the fort during the search for the next publisher; a position I again applied for.

Then, one day the new publisher was announced. I was insulted. I was ushered into a side office and gently told I wasn't "publisher material." Furthermore, if I wanted to stay with the company I would have to accept a job as a reporter for The Franklin Press, another paper in CNI's sta-

And the rest is history.

I walked out the door with my box of possessions, went to Jim's office where he worked for Country Club Properties, and together we decided it was time to birth Highlands Newspaper, which we did July 2003.

I don't begrudge CNI's move against me – actually, it was a push in the right direction and Jim and I have never looked back.

All this points to the fact that for various reasons women do not get a fair shake in the workplace. The abuse or discrimination may be so subtle it's easy to ignore, sweep under the rug or turn a blind eye to.

But don't. Too many women have struggled throughout the years for the right to an education, the right to vote, the right

Yes, yes, I've heard the stories about the mistreatment of the elephants, but as children, we didn't know that. I still shed a tear over the scene in Disney's Dumbo when the mother is chained up because the circus thought she was violent, but that never stopped me from enjoying the circus

My first recollection of going to the circus is the time my aunt took my younger sister and me to Madison Square Garden. I recall the sensory overload of the sounds and smells and seeing a man on stilts up close and personal. I came home with one of those little flashlights, which I promptly used to read beneath the covers at night.

A young Carl Sandburg thought Toby Tyler one of his favorite books (even better than Adventures of Huckleberry Finn). Harlan Ellison credits it as influencing his decision to run off with the circus.

My husband says he never did get to run away to the circus, and now he never will. I liken this to his continued yearning for a pony, which he keeps alive even today by watching Westerns. I'm sure he fueled his childhood circus fantasy by watching the circus movies we all remember.

appy Chinese New Year! A short story is in order to advise all party-givers to line up their caterer before sending out invitations. I invited eight of our neighbors over to celebrate the Chinese New Year this past Saturday.

After everyone responded positively, I called the local Asian restaurant to cater the dinner. I was told that they would all be in New York appropriately celebrating their New Year in a big way. Thus, I had to try to find a caterer (everyone is gone for the winter).

However, we rented a van and had a driver take our group to the newly remodeled Library restaurant in Cashiers. The ambiance, the service and the food were excellent and a great time was had by all. You must check it out!

Speaking of all, "all" signs point to 2017, the year of "The Rooster" as being a strong one for sales on The Plateau.

The National Association of Realtors dubbed the last few months of 2016 the "autumn revival." This revival occurred here in the mountains as well with the sales volume up over 25% for the year. Thus, going into this season, Sellers are going to feel less pressure to lower their price in order to sell. The following factors indicate that Buyers would be smart to make offers this winter instead of waiting until Spring:

 Cold weather keeps competition at av. • Interest rates are predicted to rise to 5%.

- Demand is rising.
- Good inventory is diminishing.
- Credit availability will increase under President Trump pushing for deregulations which will lead to more people being able to afford a second home.
- Prices will continue to rise as the market continues to prosper.

Many homes are off the MLS for the winter to start

"Days on Market" over in the Spring. Thus, it is important to work with a local broker to learn what inventory is available that you as a Buyer may not see as active.

Jesus Only

By Sam Forrester Whiteside Presbyterian Church

esus answered, 'I am the way and the truth and the life. No one comes to the Father except through me." (John

The greatest truth of Scripture is that salvation comes to all who will hear and believe the gospel through Jesus Christ alone, Salvation lies in Christ Iesus completely, only, and alone. To save a soul from the guilt and power of sin, Jesus alone is sufficient. His name is Jesus because "He shall save his people from their sins." "The Son of man has authority to forgive sins." God from the very beginning of this world had planned a way to save men from their sins through his only begotten Son. Our Lord Jesus Christ came into this world taking on the flesh and blood of mankind. living his life under the law, becoming obedient to death, even the death of the cross. Ask yourself, why would the Son of God come into this world and suffer all he suffered. if it were possible for man to save himself? This salvation was won for God's people by the infinite grace of Jesus Christ as he sacrificed himself through infinite love submitting to death for your sake.

It is only the wicked imaginations of men that say there is any other way for men to find a relationship with God than through Jesus Christ. The Scripture sets forth only this one way of salvation. "Salvation is found in no one else, for there is no other name under heaven given to men by which we must be saved."

What about those who believe you are saved by Jesus plus something else, like your church, works, or rituals? It is sinful to teach that the Lord Jesus has only half saved a sinner. To say men need some work or feeling of their own for the work of salvation to be completed is heretical. What do you have, that God would receive to make you righteous. Isaiah says "All of us have become like one who is unclean, and all our righteous acts are like filthy rags." To think you have something that makes you equal to God is just plain wickedness. To believe you can please God with any action you take is an arrogance that blinds.

Jesus Christ came into this world as the only begotten Son of God. He came through the virgin Mary. His Father was God. He is perfect in every aspect of his life and character.

He came to do for men in this world what they could never do for themselves. What was it they could never do? They could not keep the covenant of works. The Old Testament shows throughout its pages that man was not capable of keeping the law, he failed repeatedly. It also constantly showed men they needed someone to do for them these things they continually failed at doing. It pointed men to the One who would come and do this marvelous work on their behalf.

The New Testament testifies to the coming of this One, this Savior. Jesus Christ came to do for you those things you could never do in order to save your soul. He made a new covenant, a covenant of redemption, grounded in grace and grace alone. Through this new covenant, he and he alone has the power to save the souls of men.

Open your ears and listen to this glorious gospel message. Open your hearts and believe on this One sent to do for you such a wonderful work. Jesus makes it perfectly clear in John 14:6 "I am the way and the truth and the life. No one comes to the Father except through me.

as inmates get a single dose each time it is recommended by a physician.

Sheriff Holland's detention center staff distributes medication based on the specific needs of the inmates, which changes based on population.

"Medications are distributed by detention supervisors at designated times each day," said Holland. "There are some exceptions such as antibiotics and insulin. Those are usually distributed three times a day. We strive to be a non-narcotic facility due to the risks associated with narcotics and the chance of inmate hoarding and/or trading."

Holland said these are the types of issues they must contend with daily.

"People come in all the time claiming they are on certain medications and when they sign their medical release papers and we contact their physicians we learn they weren't prescribed the medications they are claiming to be on by a doctor so the drug they say they are on was obviously illegally obtained... due to their addictions. Many times it's why they have been incarcerated in the first place," he said.

However, Holland said sometimes narcotics are deemed necessary by the jail physician, Dr. Jason Creel, in certain circumstances and at that point the inmates on narcotics are housed outside of the general population while on those medications.

He said there is a doctor available at all times yet some people who come to jail or their families complain that they or their loved ones aren't getting their medicine.

"Many times the complaint is from a family member who has talked to their family member who is incarcerated who is claiming they haven't talked to, seen, or heard from anyone in our facility about their medical issues. Typically, we find they have been dishonest with their family hoping they will come bond them out – pulling at their heart strings," said Holland. "So like most parents, they call me upset and demanding we take care of their child. When I have received those calls, I immediately contact the jail and 100% of the time I have found the information related by the inmate was misconstrued."

On January 27, Macon County was responsible for 79 inmates which included 55 males, 24 females. Of those 79, 60 inmates were being housed at the detention center. Two inmates were deemed to be in safe keeping, one was at Broughton Hospital, and 16 were in other county jails.

Out of the 60 inmates being housed at the Macon County Detention Center, 25 inmates were on medication that the jail staff was directly responsible for administrating daily. Of the 19 inmates that were being housed outside of the county detention center, 12 received medications.

Holland said medical issues are a priority in the jail and for the Sheriffs Office as a whole.

"Everyone knows medicine is a huge liability. We are not doctors and we refuse to pretend we are. We let our jail doctor or in some cases the ER Physician make those calls. We follow their orders to the absolute letter. Many times, inmates and their family want us to do otherwise, in fact demand it, but we refuse."

The medications being administered to inmates in the care of the Macon County Detention Center system are purchased locally at U-Save It Pharmacy and are funded directly out of the Sheriff's Office budget. In some cases, the county can be reimbursed for some of the medical expenses by the inmates when they pay restitution for the incarceration. The county can also charge an inmate $10 per 30-day supply of medication.

Recently, the county approved a contract with Correctional Risk Services, Inc. to provide inmates with temporary medical insurance once they become incarcerated. According to Sheriff Holland, while the inmate's medical insurance helps bring some certainty to the county's medical line item in terms of medical care and hospital visits, the insurance does little to help with purchasing medications, as the insurance doesn't cover that expense.

An example of the cost savings the contract with Correctional Risk Services has brought the county is evident though by the decrease in claims from Angel Medical Center.

The claim payment data for the 2015 calendar year for the detention center shows billed charges of $188,662. Because of the contract, the county ended up paying $72,231. The claim payment data for the 2016 calendar year shows billed charges of $178,053. Macon County paid $65,712.

In Jackson and Haywood counties, medication distribution is taken away from the detention center staff and is handled by a third-party nursing service.

"Jackson County Detention Center utilizes a contract nursing service, currently named Southeastern Correctional Medical Group," said Jackson County Major Shannon Queen. "They have an on-site nurse in the facility 56 hours a week spread over all seven days of the week. The nurse distributes the medicines as prescribed by a physician. As with most medications, the time of day the dosages are administered can vary drastically inmate to inmate."

On average, Jackson County houses about 55 inmates per day, with about 25 of that 55 receiving medications daily.

a counselor, I have witnessed some symptoms of this, including devaluing our own work, whether it is housework, clerical work, child care or scientific work; settling for less than we want; acting competitive with each other or criticizing each other; forgetting how strong we are, how brave we are, how intelligent, capable, hardworking and faithful we are. We also deny the fact that sexism is real, having been told it is all in our heads. One way to counter these symptoms is to take action in the world on issues of importance, as the participants in the Women's March did.

I'm sure that the women marching, not only in our own country, but all over the globe, had their own differing personal reasons for doing so. I heard reasons like education, health care, equal pay for equal work, clean air, clean water, our national parks, and for children protected by the DREAM act. Though some marched against what they see as unfair treatment, the marchers I know joined together in favor of equal rights for themselves and all other groups of people who experience oppression in our world. Women are natural allies, not only for our gender, but for people everywhere who want to be able to use their God-given talents and abilities to contribute to a kinder, more enlightened world. When one group begins to shed its oppression, it allows the rest of society to become freer as well. Truly, we are all in this journey together.

Last weekend it was the Women's March. This past weekend it was the March for Life. I honor all of you for standing up for what you believe in and letting your voices be heard. I am so grateful to live in a country where this is a hallmark of our democracy.

So, go, my sisters, go. I'm sure you know that "women's work is never done." Never settle for anything less than absolutely everything right for women, and for all people everywhere, whatever that personally means to you. Express yourselves in peaceful ways and help create a better world. I'm with you.

TELL YOUR FRIENDS "I WORK

THERE!"That's right, you too can work at The Ugly Dog Pub in Highlands and Cashiers. Running a pub takes all sorts of people. People who are excited about food, wine, beer, and cocktails. People who are excited about working in a kitchen (because you want to own your own restaurant one day). People who enjoy giving excellent service to customers, whether it's delivering food to tables, cleaning up, taking orders, or mixing great cocktails. You might have a lot of experience or you might just be looking for new opportunities (that's why you're reading this, right?).
