Budget message: Highlands is healthy

By Kim Lewicki

Highlands' $10 million 2004-2005 budget message is in and it looks pretty good.

The only proposed rate increases for the coming year is for residential garbage pick up from $10 per month to $15. Commissioners need to make up a $100,000 shortfall in the General Fund due to the sanitation department expenses.

At the special May 26 Town Board meeting, the annual budget message was presented but particulars won't be decided until June 2.

At the June 2 Town Board meeting, commissioners will divvy out $50,000 to seven nonprofits; decide whether to raise property taxes by one cent to offset sanitation costs, or to raise residential or commercial garbage pick-up rates instead, and decide on pay increases.

Raising 1,905 residential users' garbage rates by $5 will generate $114,000. Raising 267 commercial

Board picks principal for Highlands

By Kim Lewicki

Either way one camp will think it won; the other will think it lost, but it's only about the children.

So announced Dr. Rodney Shotwell, Macon County Schools superintendent at the school board meeting May 24 at Nantahala School.

"I took all that mess away and did what is best for the children of Highlands School," he said. "I took the top three candidates and made my decision the morning of Monday, May 24."

The board voted unanimously for Shotwell's recommendation that Monica Bomengen be Highlands School's next principal.

Bomengen has been in the education business for 20 years. Currently she is assistant principal at Woodstock Academy in Woodstock, Conn. She hails from Hayesville and has been trying to get back home to the mountains of Western North Carolina, said Shotwell.

She holds National Board Certification in English as well as full professional certification in history. She has been a high school English department chair, state testing specialist and director of new teacher induction and professional development.

Three crimes under investigation

By Kim Lewicki

Warrants have been issued for the arrest of a couple who police believe were responsible for at least one of two breaking and enterings in Highlands last week.

Kevin Daniel Kelly, 19, of Toccoa, Ga., and Nancy Elizabeth Gillian, 18, of Liberty, S.C., are suspected of breaking into numerous vehicles parked at Tom James Tire & Auto on N.C. 28 south. Police are investigating whether they are also responsible for breaking into Elite Threads on Main Street where cash was stolen.

"We suspect they broke into several vehicles parked at Tommy James and removed various items," said Highlands Police Chief Jerry Cook. "We're waiting for latent finger print results to come back to determine if they were also responsible for the breaking and entering with larceny at Elite Threads."

Nine stereo equipment components worth about $1,500 were stolen from the parked vehicles on the James lot. About $400 worth of cash was taken from the Elite Threads cash register at exactly 6:45 a.m. Theives entered the store through a window in the alley.

At about 1:30 a.m., May 20, an officer on patrol came across the couple parked in a white Ford Ranger in the James Tire & Auto lot. They told police they heard something was going on at the lot so they came to check it out. The officer noticed some stereo speakers in the truck, but Kelly said the equipment was his. With no probable cause to hold them, the officer sent them on their way. After further investigation, he found several

Later that morning, an EMS employee on his way to work passed the Ford Ranger wrecked on the Horse Cove Road. No one was in the truck, but he did see the speakers, which he identified as his own. "He knew they were his because he made the casing around them," said Chief Cook.

Later that morning, officers on patrol saw a couple matching Kelly's and Gillian's description sitting on the curb outside Elite Threads, apparently waiting for a ride, said Cook.

Officers are also investigating an unrelated robbery at a home on Potter Lane where about $31,000 worth of jewelry was reported missing.

The owner of the home told police she left her maid and a workman doing pressure cleaning at the home while she went out. She claims she found the gold, diamond, and pearl jewelry missing upon her return about 1 p.m., May 21.

The case is under investigation.

users' rates $3 will generate $15,000. Raising property taxes one cent will generated between $100,000 and $150,000.

Since most of the landfill garbage is commercial garbage and landfill tipping rates are partially responsible for the shortfall in the sanitation department commissioners are suggesting businesses shoulder the cost.

"Most of the garbage is commercial and that's what we're paying for," said Commissioner Herb James. "But I think it might be better to raise property taxes one penny, instead."

Four capital projects slated for 2004-2005 include the wastewater treatment plant for which the town has been putting money aside for years; Holt Knob water system improvements estimated to cost $150,000; the Poplar Street sewer line estimated at $280,000; and the water remediation and preservation project to clean up area lakes. That money is expected to come through grants.

The wastewater treatment plant will be funded primarily by the town with money it has been allocating for years and possibly by the county.

Commissioners also plan on asking the county for help in funding Holt Knob water improvements and the Poplar Street sewer line.

The $300,000 the town has been getting from the county for water and sewer improvements for the past 13 years is over, but for 2004-2005, the county has a set aside $450,000 for water and sewer improvements in Highlands and Franklin. The stipulation is the projects must benefit residents outside the town, said Betz.

The county has allocated its traditional $150,000 for the Highlands Civic Center. But commissioners still want to discuss other options with the county.

All in all the economic outlook of Highlands continues to be good. Highlands fund balance, recommended to be eight percent of total expenditures ranges from 28 percent to 95 percent in various funds.

"We need a high fund balance in a town this size," said Mayor Buck Trott. "What if we had another Opal, for instance, we would need to use that money." He said emergency funds from organizations like FEMA take years to get.

Call goes out to help Sanchez

About three years ago, Irene Sanchez was diagnosed with multiple myeloma.

After fighting the disease with the classic medical procedures, an optimistic attitude and a lot of prayers, she is in remission.

Doctors have said it's possible a stem cell transplant will beat the disease or at least keep it in remission.

Waiting her turn for the needed blood components will take a long time so friends, family and friends decided to start the necessary blood drive on their own.

The American Red Cross has set up a special blood drive to benefit Irene from 12:30 to 5:30 p.m. at the Franklin Baptist Church on Iotla Street in Franklin.

Irene specifically needs stem cells that match hers for a stem cell transplant.

All blood types are eligible. Donors may have to pay $35 for the test

if only stem cells are retrieved, but blood platelets are also needed and those donating blood platelets may do so for free.

If a match is found for Irene, the donor would have to travel to Duke University to provide blood for Irene's transplant.

Chances of a match are greater if the donor is of Greek origin.

Call 369-9559 to set up an appointment. Make sure you mention Irene's name.

She expects to receive her doctoral degree (Ed.D.) in educational leadership in January 2005.

Shotwell said she has a strong background in curriculum and instruction, professional development, mentoring, and grant writing.

"I think she will do a good job," said board member

Tommy Cabe. "I think she is one of the top candidates we interviewed."

Since March when the community learned Principal Jack Brooks was leaving, teachers, staff and parents were divided as to promoting within the system and hiring from the outside.

Shotwell and his panel of teachers and PTO members poured over 20 applications, discarded two immediately and ended up with nine serious contenders.

After four final days of intensive interviews, the candidates were ranked one to nine. Shotwell talked to the top three candidates before making his final decision.

Board member Donny Edwards said he talked to Bomengen on the phone for 45 minutes the night before the board meeting and thought she would be a good choice, should Shotwell recommend her. "I think she will do a good job. She has the experience," he said.

Bomengen will arrive sometime in June.

Highlands Theme Park

Note: Most old-timers in Highlands will know Charlie Johnson. He was born in Horse Cove and was my neighbor for over 20 years. He died about 5 years ago. He was so much fun to talk to and I miss him. I could tell Charlie Johnson stories for a week and never repeat myself.

Are you sick and tired of being sick and tired over all the growth and changes taking place in Highlands? Do you long for the "good old days" when life was more simple and quiet?

Can you believe Highlands has a bypass? Or worse, walk/don't walk lights, just like New York City. How about timed parking that requires everyone to wear a watch so they will know when to move their car to another timed spot?

There is hammering and sawing all over town. Uppity people are everywhere. Smiling, waving and saying "hey" to a stranger is fading rapidly. Everyone seems to be busy making money. (Mountain man Charlie Johnson would be outraged and threaten never to go to town again. But then again, Charlie said that when they put the first traffic light in town.)

Well, I have a plan. Myself and several of my friends are pooling our money and plan to open a nearby "Old Highlands Theme Park." We are going to use the sixties era as our theme. Sound exciting?

Here is how it works. If you are having one of those exasperating days when wall to wall tourists and jammed traffic on Main Street are getting you down, head for the "Old Highlands Theme Park."

Visit the five and ten cent store on the hill, where you can buy most anything but a crocheted soup ladle. Then gas up at the Gulf station but don't try to use a credit card because they'll give you a weird look. Instead, write an out of town check without showing ID.

Fred Wooldridge

Feel free to park your car for as long as you want, wherever you want. Leave the doors unlocked and the keys in the ignition if you want. Sit on the bench and pick up some hot Highlands' gossip. Today's rumor: There's another Catholic family moving to Highlands. Everyone's worried.

Wander down to Highlands' only grocery, Pott's Market and see if any of the local musicians are having a Sunday afternoon jam session in the parking lot. Tell Mr. Potts you want to open a charge account for groceries. He'll smile and say, "Give the girl your name and address." That's it, you have your account.

Head over to Lee's Inn and just sit and rock. The only thing the folks over there will ask you is if you're having a nice day and would you like a glass of iced tea.

For dinner, sink your teeth into one of the best sirloins you will find anywhere at Big John's restaurant, back in the alley behind Main Street, where it's OK to sneak in a jug of your favorite booze and everyone promises to look the other way. You know it's OK because the police chief is sitting at the next table. And if you stand in front of the Galax Theater long enough, someone will come over and try to sell you some of the best "white lightning" you will ever sip. All in whisper tones, of course.

After dark, you will want to see and be seen at Helen's barn, where lots of smooching and other interesting things are going on in the parking lot. Inside, the place is jumping with some of the

Rapping about b-ball

Well, before I hit y'all up with my foray into the rap world, I would just like to make a few notes. First of all, I have to say that I love play-off hockey. Regular season hockey is slow, boring and worst of all, not important enough in the standings to matter. Playoff hockey is fast paced, exciting, and every second counts. For the record, I am going with Calgary and Tampa Bay in the Stanley Cup Finals with Calgary and my boy Jerome Iginla taking home the Cup. Secondly, Barry Bonds is the best hitter in baseball, Roger Clemens is 7-0 with the top ERA in the NL, and Randy Johnson throws a perfect game. Dad-are you sure you have given up on your baseball career?

Now, for this week's main event. As I was contemplating this concept, I thought about using an older rap song, maybe one that everyone has heard at least once so that they could hear the tune in their brain. Alas, "Ice Ice Baby" just didn't have enough potential for what I wanted to do.

However, one of the top songs on the charts right now is the song "Yeah" by Usher. Now Usher is not exactly a rapper, seeing as his claim to fame was singing smooth R&B songs with no shirt on, ever. Let's just say he would have had a problem going into the Lil' Cricket down in Walhalla — no shirt, no shoes, no service. (And as Josh Bryson would tell you, they don't take kindly to Santa Claus, either) But while Usher isn't a rapper, the rage these days is to increase your credibility by collaborating with rappers — in this case Ludacris and Lil' Jon (not to be confused with Lil' Cricket, one has platinum teeth, the other has...space). I personally recommend everyone listen to this song not only because it has a great beat (and you can dance to it) but also for the sheer comedy of Lil' Jon randomly screaming OOOOKKKAAAAAY and YYYYYEEEEEEEEAAAAHHH.

So I had my song, but then I needed a concept with which to work with, and I thought about something that has been a part of my life for a long time now. Since I was about 14, I have played basketball at the Rec Park on Monday nights and have immensely enjoyed playing up there. And in honor of that, I present to you my ode to the Monday Night Wars engaged on the (NFL films voice) Dusty Floor of the Highlands Civic Center.

You can get a drink, but you'll have to slip outside in the parking lot because all of Macon County is bone dry. Not to worry though because there is no enforcement after midnight. If you need an officer, call the chief at home.

Finally, are you sitting down? There is not even one public toilet in our theme park but don't panic as most of the merchants will let you use theirs.

Well, that's just a taste of what to expect in our new Highlands' Theme Park. Doesn't it sound exciting?

(Monday morning) Ah ... well ... ah ... there has been a slight adjustment in our plans. Well, I didn't give in right away but when "they" offered me three times what the park was worth, what could I do?

Actually, I did it for the good of everyone. Highlands needs a triple deck parking garage with pay toilets on every floor a lot more than a theme park. Besides, I could use the money.

Weekly Highlands TV show to air soon on channel 14

Katie Brugger, who writes the book reviews for The Highlands Newspaper, and her husband Arthur Hancock are creating a new TV show about Highlands and the surrounding area. "Heart of the High Country" will begin airing in June on Northland Cable's Channel 14.

"We feel that a local TV show is something Highlands has needed for a long time," Katie said. "Our one-hour show will feature 'welcome to Highlands/here's what to do in the area' segments coupled with programming that changes weekly: interviews with interesting people, special event coverage, music, community participation, and more. Northland Cable has been very enthusiastic and supportive of our idea. We're making a real TV show here, with a minimum of thirty minutes of fresh content every week."

Brugger and Hancock began their video production company Time Capsule Video eight years ago. Their "North Carolina Mountain" videos have sold many thousands of copies. "We're interested in people," Arthur says, "and we believe every person has something interesting to say. When we got our first video camera nine years ago we immediately went out and started interviewing people."

"Heart of the High Country" will air four times a day — 8 am, 5 pm, 9 pm, and 10 pm — seven days a week. The first show is officially scheduled to air on Monday June 14, although broadcasting may begin earlier.

People interested in participating or being a sponsor should call Time Capsule Video at 526-2954 or write for a brochure: Time Capsule Video P.O. Box 2485 Highlands NC 28741

Gantenbein a certified administrator

On April 15 Highlands Zoning Administrator Larry Gantenbein, passed the N.C. State Zoning Official Certification Examination. He is now a N.C. Certified Zoning Official. The program is administered by the UNC School of Law through the Institute of Government at Chapel Hill. To be eligible to take the certification examination, Gantenbein had to complete more than 80 hours of classroom instruction at the Institute of Government, have a minimum of two years experience as a local government zoning official and be currently employed as a zoning official. "Very few municipalities have certified zoning administrators," said Mayor Buck Trott. The program is only offered every two years and class size is limited to 40 students who are drawn from a statewide pool.

Monte Carlo Night on May 28

The excitement of a casino and the drama of an auction house come together under one roof for "A Night in Monte Carlo," sponsored by the Literacy Council of Highlands next Friday, May 28, at Highlands Conference Center.

Dozens of local merchants and dining establishments have donated a treasure-trove of gifts and services for the live and silent auctions. Items include jewelry, hand-blown glass, paintings, sporting goods, gift certificates to many of the area's finest restaurants, golf packages from some of Highlands' distinguished golf courses, and much more.

Several of Highlands' most talented chefs have created a menu of heavy hors d'oeuvres for the evening, which features roulette, blackjack and other games of chance operated by members and friends of Highlands Rotary Club.

Proceeds from the gala go to the Literacy Council of Highlands, which has seen remarkable growth in recent months. Adult Literacy, English as a Second Language (ESL), and General Education Development (GED) are three programs offered to the adult community while After School Tutoring and Summer Tutoring are available for school-age students.

Up for Auction – A hand-blown glass vase is among the many valuable items up for auction at "A Night in Monte Carlo," sponsored by the Literacy Council of Highlands, Friday, May 28 at the Highlands Conference Center.

Founded in 1991, the Literacy Council of Highlands provides residents with free and confidential instruction in reading, writing, math, and oral expression (basic through advanced). The non-profit organization also offers training programs to prepare volunteers for all programs.

Tickets for Monte Carlo Night are $35 in advance or at the door, subject to availability.

For more information about Monte Carlo Night, or to learn more about the Literacy Council and its programs, call Angie Jones at (828) 526-9938, ext 240.

Faith, Fear, & Fun

My best columns seem to happen when I begin thinking about what to write early in the week and let my thoughts incubate in my mind. Or maybe they just seem that way to me?

Faith – Find it! •
Fear – Lose it! • Fun – Have it!

Faith. I start my day with a little faith. I prepare my mind with coffee and a daily devotion. Always one of my favorites...Daily Word (Silent Unity's Magazine) or Living Faith, (Daily Catholic Devotions) and on a good day, which means I have a little more time, I take a glimpse into Simple Abundance (a Daybook of Comfort and Joy). The value of praying daily helps me make the most out of opportunities to draw closer to God. I still have a lot of work to do when it comes to my faith but one thing I make sure of is that it is part of my daily life. I'm not very good at this faith thing or math for that matter. So, I go to an expert and for me, I listen to Fr. Bill. This morning at church I asked him what faith was. He replied, "A gift from God. You either got it or you don't. I have it and you have it." I smiled. It's because of Father Bill that I attend church every Sunday. I was very lucky to find him in the mountains. I always said I was going to find a great man when I moved to the mountains. What do you know, I did. Thanks, Father Bill. You might know him, he writes a column once in awhile for this newspaper called Spiritually Speaking.

Fear. Face it and then keep on going. Eleanor Roosevelt's quote about fear makes it just a little easier. She said, "You gain strength, experience and confidence by every experience where you really stop to look fear in the face...You must do the things you think you cannot do". If you don't look fear in the face, you may spend your life running from it. Fear always runs as fast as you do. When you let fear rule your choices, you are not choosing your own path. You can outdistance that which is running after you, but not that which is running inside you. Never let fear of failure put limits on you! Easier said than done, of course. But somebody has to at least say it.

Fun. I like it and I practice it. When I was building my home, I would rush into Jennings Builders Supply & Hardware with a magic wand expressing to all that I needed a little "magic" and I needed it NOW. This simply meant I was undergoing one of my many home building panic moments. Or I love wearing my burnt orange square toe shoes that I bought in Florence, Italy. Often I take my magic wand and wizard hat when I fly. It usually assures an empty seat next to me. Last week, after a photo appeared of me in one of the local newspapers or should I say a photo of everything but my face, I decided to give up feeling embarrassed forever. I just made the decision to accept that some uneasiness happens in life, especially if you are having fun. Life's too short not to laugh.

The 'Red Hat' ladies (in purple & red attire) are alive and well in Highlands

By Sally Hanson

Contributor

Be on the lookout for ladies dressed in the now fashionably correct attire of deep purple coupled with bright red. The Red Hat Society is alive and well in Highlands, and throughout the season its colorful birds will be seen, for sure, gracing the streets of Highlands on their way to or from some frivolous affair meant solely for fun.

The Red Hat Society came to life in 1988, started by Sue Ellen Cooper. "It began as a result of a few women deciding to greet middle age with verve, humor and élan. We believe silliness is the comedy relief of life, and since we are all in it together, we might as well join red-gloved hands and go for the gusto together. Underneath the frivolity, we share a bond of affection, forged by common life experiences and a genuine enthusiasm for wherever life takes us next," said Cooper. Today the "red hat ladies" are in 61 countries, and there are more than 20,000 individual groups around the world.

But what exactly is the Red Hat Society? Social groups of women who wear purple and red when they go out together to just have fun.

Junior members who are younger than 50-years-old wear lavender and pink, as they are in training, say society members..

Members play golf, go to tea parties or go out to eat, attend shows, movies and plays, and anything else that requires the ladies to get together and have a good time.

Highlands has its own chapter of the Red Hat Society, with 53 local members. There are also 27 women on a waiting list. According to Richard Taylor, owner of the Mountainique and local retailer of Red Hat Society merchandise, the local group is going to be divided into two or three other groups because demand is so high. "They'll be limited to 15 or 20 members, as restaurants don't want groups of more than 20," he said.

In fact, the Society is becoming so popular "dress-up" items are becoming available in stores like Mountainique. "We have jewelry, boas, gloves, shirts, t-shirts, visors, hair clips, skirt and pants suits, sunglasses, shoes, pocketbooks, and over 50 different hats" Taylor said.

For more about the Red Hat Society, contact Richard Taylor at Mountainique.

Richard Taylor, owner of Mountainique in Town Square, has made his store the "one stop shop" for Red Hat Society paraphernalia. If you don't notice the abundance of red and purple accessories, Eloise, the Red Hat Society mascot, let's you know you're in the right place.

New management at Mountain Fresh

Charlene Bryson, who worked as the store's bookkeeper for 14 years has returned as manager of Mountain Fresh Fine Foods. Charlene and the staff are excited and eager to begin a new season and welcome old and new friends. The staff invites everyone to stop in and share their ideas, their thoughts, or at least a cup of coffee!

The Red Hat Society creed

"Warning"

by Jenny Joseph

When I am an old woman I shall wear purple
With a red hat which doesn't go and doesn't suit me.
And I shall spend my pension on brandy and summer gloves
And satin sandals, and say we've no money for butter.
I shall sit down on the pavement when I'm tired
And gobble up samples in shops and press alarm bells
And run my stick along the public railings
And make up for the sobriety of my youth.
I shall go out in my slippers in the rain
And pick the flowers in other people's gardens . . .
But maybe I ought to practice a little now?
So people who know me are not too shocked and surprised
When suddenly I am old, and start to wear purple.

The rappelling drop will be harder to get to and longer than last year.

Officials blaze trails for SOAR race set for June 26

By Luke Osteen
Contributor

Adventurers from across the country are invited to participate in the Special Operations Adventure Race in Highlands, NC, at 7:30 a.m. Saturday, June 26.

The grueling course will challenge racers' running, mountain biking, rappelling and paddling skills. Participants are expected to make their way through the course with only a map and compass – no GPS devices are allowed.

Proceeds from the event will benefit the Special Operations Warrior Foundation, which provides scholarship grants to the children of Special Forces personnel killed in an operation or training.

The first SOAR race in Highlands was last year and $35,000 was raised. Officials are hoping for more this year.

Since 1980 the Special Operations community has lost more than 370 members, leaving behind more than 400 children – and that figure is quickly climbing.

New this year is a silent auction, "A Night to Honor Our Fallen Heroes," at 7 p.m., Thursday, June 24 at the Highlands Conference Center.

Cost for the event is $15 and will feature hors d'oeuvres and refreshments and rollicking entertainment by Curtis Blackwell and the Bluegrass Boys.

Highlighting the evening will be an auction featuring donations by local businesses. Among the treasures up for auction are golf packages, vacation rental home packages, art, fine wines, bed and breakfast packages, manicures and pedicures, spa treatments, art glass, fishing tackle, meals at local restaurants, adventure tours and more.

Tickets will be available at the door. For more information, call Nancy Horwitz at 526-0224.

Other ways to support SOAR's efforts is through the purchase of raffle tickets for leather jackets from Jolie's and rugs from Shiraz. Tables are set up in front of Shiraz on the weekends and at two grocery stores at various times.

Another way to support the cause is by sponsoring a scholarship at the Warrior Level ($5,000), Patriot Level ($2,500), Eagle Level ($1,000), Freedom Level ($500) and Liberty Level ($250).

To make a donation, call Bill Horwitz at 526-0224.

Hospital water line funding in place

By Kim Lewicki

The financial pieces are finally in place for the hospital water line, but the target start-up date of November 1 still looms on the horizon.

"There is a lot of work to do in a short period of time," said Town

Engineer Lamar Nix.

McGill Associates, of Asheville, is the engineering firm responsible for designing the project, surveying and completing the permitting process, but as lead agency the town is concerned with the timetable.

"DOT wants to resurface U.S. 64 east during the next paving season so they want to know when the water line project will be finished," said Nix. "A lot is hanging on the permitting process and no one has much control over that

Mongolia

By Phyllis Picklesimer
Contributor

As an eight-year-old drawn to the excitement of Roy Chapman Andrews' discovery of dinosaur bones and eggs in the Gobi Desert of Mongolia, I would not have believed that I would one day stand in the spot where he made his great finds.

Mongolia today is smaller than it was when its fierce warriors and Khan leaders were the scourge of neighboring countries and beyond. Famous for their horsemanship, a trait passed down to its men today with their herds of sturdy horses still seen riding across the plains, their brutality was legendary. Today it is approximately twice the size of Texas, as Russia and China have in the past taken bits and pieces of it for themselves.

The Gobi Desert makes up almost one-third of the country and extends itself into China. The desert is a living entity and continues to stretch itself further south each year. There are also high mountain areas, but much is covered in grasslands or by pebbly flats, generally treeless.

Ulaan Baatar is the capital. Flying into the airport can raise adrenaline levels, as your aging Mongolian Airlines' Russian-made propeller plane descends between a gap in the surrounding mountains. The wing tips seeming to be only a few feet from bare rock and the slopes beneath the plane look close enough to touch.

The city is mostly modern with its Russian-railroad-station influence architecture, utilitarian with its straight lines and grandiose size. There is the requisite sweeping main square with mounted general statue fountain and large areas conducive to past Russian military pageantry.

Even though most of the city is modern, steps have been taken to preserve some architectural and historical treasures. The Gandategchinlin Khiid Monastery in Ulaan Baatar is the most important Buddhist monastery in the country and well worth a visit. Mongolians practice Tibetan Buddhism with its lamas and prayer wheels. The Gandan (for short) Khiid is home to a school for educating young monks some of whom seem to be only seven-to eight-years-old. In the mornings, they chant their prayers to Buddha, still, not withstanding their shaved heads and dark crimson and saffron robes, acting like young boys anywhere, always moving and watching their friends.

The most important feature of the monastery is its Migjid Janraisig Stature (Opener of Wisdom Eyes.) It is 75 feet tall, weighs 20 tons, is gilded, and decorated with more than two thousand precious stones from Mongolian soil. Inside it were placed 27 tons of medicinal herbs and junipers, 334 volumes of Buddhist sutras, two million mantra books, a whole ger (yurt) with furniture, and rare clothes of well-known Buddhist saints among other things. It is most definitely a sight to behold.

To really experience the Mongolia of most of its inhabitants, travel outside the city is necessary. Karakorum, selected by Ghinghis Khan as his capital, is one such place. It contains the restored Erdene Zuu Khiid that was the first Buddhist monastery in Mongolia and is today its second most important after Gandan Khiid.

Hotels, as we know them, are non-existent in Karakorum. For an "experience," try one of the ger camps. Made of compressed wool felt supported by a round wooden frame, the gers usually contain two or three beds, a table with stools, a stove for heating (in a mostly treeless country fuel is often dried animal dung), and rugs or linoleum. The facilities are in a separate bathhouse.

The gers can be put up or

Hay rides at Carpe Diem Farms

Rotarians and their families enjoyed a "day on the farm," at Carpe Diem Farms Saturday, May 15. Instead of Rotarian business, it was all just for fun – a time for socializing, supper and a hayride.

taken down in just a few hours. This is the main housing of most of the Mongolian people. The disassembled ger is packed onto their truck along with their furniture and other belongings. Next the sheep and goats are transported to a new grazing site in the truck. Their Bactrian (two humped) camels and horses are usually herded to the new area. Land is not owned in Mongolia so everyone is free to move at will to any new location that suits.

Spending a week traveling through the Gobi Desert and staying in the various ger camps is fun, even for the traveler who thinks Motel 6 is camping out. Ger stays are popular with many sojourners; even the President of Mongolia spent one night in our camp. One drawback my six feet two inch husband discovered regularly was entering the ger with its approximately four and a half feet tall doorway. Luckily wearing a hat cut down on some of the damage.

While in the Gobi Desert, visit the site of Roy Chapman Andrews' discoveries and even find some small pieces of bone for yourself. To tell if you have dinosaur bone or only a rock, touch it with your tongue. Dinosaur bone is sticky.

Also in the Gobi, Yolym Am is a spectacular narrow valley surrounded by craggy mountains. It is home to the elusive snow leopard, ibex, wild yaks, and several species of birds. Khongoryn Els, another park, is an area of towering sand dunes. In the evening, they seem to glow and pulse from within in the golden desert sunset.

The Mongolian people have been fired in the kiln of life to emerge with a sure strength and a glaze of Buddhist acceptance and inevitability of what life holds for them. They meet the challenges of their daily life and climate with a stoic grace. Mongolia and her people had played their siren song to me for over 50 years. Accepting its call, I found it as enthralling as the eight-year-old me expected it to be.

Phyllis and her husband are seasonal residents of Highlands. Her husband comes from a long line of Picklesimers here in Highlands. Phyllis works as a travel agent.

Christ's foundation will get you through life

Eddie Ingram – HUMC

I looked at the graduates during the baccalaureate service last Sunday and I realized one thing – life is SHORT. This is not a dress rehearsal.

We only have one chance to get this thing called life right. We don't have time to mess around. May 29 is the Highlands School graduation, and it will never come this way again. Our graduates have their whole life ahead of them and so many options, but they only graduate from high school once.

The foundation that we build our life upon is critical. Jesus said that the person who hears these words of mine – but not just hears them – but puts them into practice – is like a man who builds his house on a rock and when the rain comes, the creek rises, the hurricane comes, the house will stand because of what the foundation is built upon. And everyone who hears these words – and does not act on them – is like a foolish man who builds his house on sand. When the rain and floods come, the winds blow and beats upon the house – the house falls – and what a mighty fall. Foundation is critical. It is up to our young graduates to decide what the foundation of their life is going to be. Who will they serve? Where will their life devotion be? They have room in their life for ONLY one devotion. Jesus said "no one can serve two masters." They will be known in their lives for their one thing. That's the way life is. Their life devotion will be revealed. It's their foundation.

Like the house on sand, our graduates lives will sink if it is not built on the solid foundation. They've got to get it right to start with.

Later on in the gospel of Matthew, Jesus turns to his friend and follower Peter and says, "Who do people say that I am?" And Peter responds, "Some say John the Baptist, some say Elijah, and others Jeremiah or a prophet." And Jesus says to Peter, "Now that you've told me who everybody else thinks I am, who do you say that I am?" And Peter responds, "You are the Messiah, the Son of the living God." As our graduates all go their separate ways, this is a foundational question for all of us. There are lots of people who have their opinion about this man named Jesus. Many people would agree that Jesus was a good teacher, a good example, a good man. But for we who follow the man named Jesus, it goes much farther. The man Jesus has to do with the very foundation upon which our life is built. I have had plenty of positive role models in my life. But those people are not the rock foundation that I build my life upon. Because no matter how good people are, flesh and blood will fail us. Being good is not good enough. A good teacher cannot change me and save me from my own mistakes. A good example cannot live my life for me. Lots of people can help me and walk with

A Registered Dietitian and Certified Diabetes Educator in addition to having a masters degree in Health Sciences, Smith has been the Clinical Dietitian for acute care patients and the residents of the Fidelia Eckerd Living Center for the past five years. She also managed the hospital's dietary department for the last four years. Lesley Madden, RD, LDN, a lifelong resident of Cashiers who has worked with Smith on a part-time basis for the past two years, will now assume the role of Clinical Dietitian for both in-patients and Living Center residents. Smith will remain as manager of Clinical Nutrition Services.

"We are very fortunate to have someone with the necessary knowledge and credentials already on the hospital staff to head this popular and successful program," said Administrator Jim Graham. "As part of her duties as hospital dietitian, Yvonne Smith has been part of the HealthTracks team providing exercise and nutrition counseling, and she is in a unique position to bring both continuity and expertise to her new position."

HealthTracks offers a wide variety of exercise, diet, and healthy lifestyle programs to the general public, most without a physician referral. The program grew out of the hospital's cardiac and pulmonary rehabilitation program, expanding to offer monitored and independent exercise programs to the general public, along with yoga, stress reduction, smoking cessation, and weight loss programs. The cardiac rehab program is one of only a handful of nationally-certified programs in North Carolina.

In addition to maintaining the standards and certification of existing offerings, Smith says she hopes to expand HealthTracks services to an even wider audience in the future. For example, classes in Pilates will begin in June and will be open to the community. Yoga classes will resume in June as well. Personal fitness and wellness programs are offered year around and include one-on-one personal training to meet individual needs. Private consultations for weight loss and diabetes management and education are also available.

Smith and her husband Bud operated a private Nautilus fitness center in Glenville for five years in the 1980s, before she returned to school, earning a bachelor's degree from Western Carolina University in Sport Management with a concentration in exercise sciences and a minor in nutrition.

She was fitness director at the North Carolina Center for the Advancement of Teaching in Cullowhee for four years before returning to the classroom to earn a masters degree in Health Sciences, specializing in nutrition.

Smith was employed at Jackson County Health Dept before joining the staff of Highlands-Cashiers Hospital.

• BUILDERS & ARCHITECTS •

For years, Koenig Homebuilders has been setting the standards of craftsmanship and values that many area Builders are envious of. Koenig's product speaks for itself, but the company's level of expertise is what makes it so desirable. Unlike most Builders that sub-contract much of their framing, siding, trim and specialty work (such as timber framing), Koenig does it all in-house. With almost 50 folks on our payroll, they have a better handle on schedules, budget, and most importantly, craftsmanship levels.

Koenig Homebuilders uses a team approach to custom building. From land selection and conceptual design right through punch list and warranty, Koenig tries to make your process as painless and seamless as possible. They believe building a home should be fun, not drudgery.

me and support me but it is only a Messiah who can change me.

If Jesus Christ is not foundational, I am bound for trouble. My problem is I try to make my faith in Jesus OPTIONAL. I don't mind being a Christian, as long as it doesn't interfere in my social life, or my career pursuit, or my night life. I like options. In college I loved the elective courses. It made me feel like I had control. We are an options kind of people. And when we have so many options, we accommodate. The things that are most important we try to make into options. But once again, there is only one thing that can be foundational for our house.

A good foundation requires discipline. Believe it or not, the world doesn't exist for us. We exist for the world. Life is wonderful. But this thing called life gets hard. It means being a disciple – it means doing the things you really don't want to do in order to become the person God created you to be.

This thing called discipleship is not just an extra thing if you have time or if the mood hits you. It is what your life will be built upon and what you will be known for. We're not supposed to lose Christian disciples when soccer season begins, or when basketball season begins, or when it gets warm enough to pull your camper to the lake on weekends. Remember, you are known by your one thing!

For our graduates going to college, the test of how foundational Christ is in their lives will come on that first Sunday morning of their freshmen year. For those not going to college, what will they do when the seventh day of the week comes, what will they do? Discipline.

To be the person God created you to be requires making tough decisions. This is where it gets hard. If we base our life on what we feel like doing, we are bound for trouble. If we don't set our priorities, the world will set them for us.

I believe there is enough God-given potential in the class of 2004 to change the world. They are being sent out into a world that is so much more complex, so pressure-filled, more difficult to be faithful, than many adults today have experienced. But it's funny how God works. God has given them enough gifts, enough potential, to change the world – even this world. If they lay the foundation upon the rock – the solid rock – that will last – and what God will accomplish in and through them will be unlimited.

'Melt' at PAC Friday & Saturday

By Adam Heffernan
Contributor

Last weekend I had the pleasure of attending a performance of "Melt" a dance show presented by Dance Centre of WNC at the Huey Auditorium in Cullowhee.

I strongly urge everyone to attend this production when it arrives in Highlands this weekend at the Martin-Lipscomb Performing Arts Center.

Featuring an incredible cast of area high school students (including Highlanders Russel & Sherri Marling) I was blown away by the amazing talents of these dancers.

A collection of different dance styles, including ballet, modern and jazz, "Melt" is a brilliant two hours to spend at the theatre.

As someone who is not a dancer, I enjoyed the show immensely. It was funny and beautiful and poetic and so many other wonderful adjectives. I cannot recommend it enough.

The highlight of show for me was a modern number titled "Popeye" done to the music of Dave Mathews. I kid you not, it was deeply moving.

Kim Luzzi and her team have done outstanding work and it deserves an audience. Please, please do not miss this. If you support children-in-the-arts programs, if you love modern, jazz and ballet, or even if you've never been to a dance concert, you must attend this show Friday or Saturday at 7 p.m. Tickets are available at the PAC box office on Chestnut Street.
